Neutron bomb wins House support

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The neutron warhead moved one step closer to deployment Thursday when the House voted in favor of its production, 297-109.

For the second day in a row, the House spent two and one half hours debating the merits of the weapon in terms sometimes emotional, sometimes dispassionate. A theory of the Lawrence Livermore Laboratory's Dr. Edward Teller became the focal point of Thursday's discussion.

Ironically, although the weapon received overwhelming support from the House as a whole, it was almost unanimously rejected by the representatives of the its Northern California birthplace. In the area from San Luis Obispo on the south to Marin County and Contra Costa County on the north and from the Pacific east through Alameda County — an area represented by 10 Congressmen — only one member — Leo J. Ryan (D-South San Francisco) -- voted for the weapon.

Another, Rep. Paul McClosky (R-Portola Valley) cast no vote at all.

Of the other eight, all actually spoke out against the weapon except Rep. Norm Mineta (D-San Jose) and Rep. Fortney "Pete" Stark (D-Oakland). It was in Stark's district — at Lawrence Livermore Laboratory — that the weapon was invented.

All eight of the Northern California opponents felt strongly enough about the issue to vote not only against the weapon but — when that effort failed — against the larger budget bill for the Energy Research and Development Administration national security work. In the latter vote they were joined by 70 other members.

The neutron weapon is a warhead that reduces the blast and heat effect of nuclear explosion while increasing the radiation effects. Proponents sometimes call it a "clean" bomb that limits "collateral" (unintended) damage; opponents consider it an inhumane weapon that places more value on buildings on than people and that might make nuclear war more likely, because it might be used more readily than other nuclear weapons.

Towards the end of Thursday's debate, several House members took the floor to praise the caliber of the debate itself; they said it was the highest level, most intelligent debate they had seen in their two to four years on Capitol Hill.

While the debate did provide a thorough airing of many concerns, one cynic suggested that what some of these members like most about the discussion was that it hardly included any input from conservatives.

Instead, House liberals from the Armed Services Committee defended the weapon against attacks from their liberal colleagues.

Rumors fly on possible AC walkout

OAKLAND — AC Transit union leaders are denying vehemently rumors their members will exercise an earlier strike sanction vote and walk off the job this weekend.

Union president John Wesley Jr., said in a press release, "At this time there is no strike date set. We are still in the process of trying to settle this contract without a strike. If and when we have to strike, the members will be notified through bulletins, the news media and from this office."

His office says the rumor stems from an AC Credit Union newsletter which says no loans will be made after Oct. 1 until a settlement is reached.

A credit union official in turn said, "We're not going out on strike."

Amalgamated Transit Union Division 194 members overwhelmingly rejected a management offer this summer, and authorized their executive committee to call a strike.

State mediator Joseph Anderson was brought in to avert the strike. He was in negotiations yesterday and unavailable for comment.

In addition to some 1,450 drivers, the union represents roughly 250 maintenance personnel and 150 clerks.

If union members walk off their jobs, 824 buses covering 194 routes across 600-square-miles of the East Bay will be shut down.

AC currently logs some 224,000 passenger trips per day, including 40,000 trans-bay trips to downtown San Francisco and feeder bus service to BART stations in Alameda and Contra Costa counties.

Drivers now earn $8.03 per hour. Neither union nor AC officials would comment on current demands and offers.

Union members have been operating without a contract since July 1.

One source close to both union and management said the negotiations had been "calm" since the strike authorization vote, but that union leaders seemed "anxious" this past week.

This Wookie won't fall in villain Vader's hands

SAN RAMON — Young Eric Bergh is admittedly a "science-fiction fanatic."

One gathers that immediately when greeted at the door by the ape ("Chewbacca," the "Wookie") from the all-time movie classic "Star Wars."

A highly enterprising aficionado of "Planet of the Apes," "Creature Features," and other sci-fi super attractions, Eric has fashioned not only the mask likeness of the "Star Wars" Wookie, but an exceptional model of R2-D2 (the constantly beep-beeping little robot), the Tusken raider head, a miniature of the elephant-size creatures the "sand people" rode, a miniature of "C3PO's" head and the Millenium Falcon craft — the intergalactic craft piloted by the Wookie and "Princess Leia's" rescuer, as portrayed by young Mark Hamill.

Eric became interested in science-fiction about three years ago. "I used to watch 'Lost in Space' on television and have seen all five of the 'Planet of the Apes' series five times each or more."

He is an avid viewer of "Creature Features" on Channels 2 and 40 and has sent for bumper stickers, the listings of upcoming attractions, and been invited to join the program's fan club.

Eric, whose stepfather is considering opening a "Star Wars" artifacts store in Sacramento, also likes collecting the ape series books and has read "Making of Space: 1999."

He has also written to "Star Wars" director George Lucas, via the latter's publishing firm affiliation, to obtain the names of those who created the sensational effects in the movie — "so I can send letters to them congratulating them."

It becomes evident that 15-year old Eric has more than a hobbyist's interest in the apes-creatures realm, showing his interviewer the "Star Wars" items he has made while wearing the ape head mask and homemade furry arm pieces.

His R2-D2 is extremely close to the one in "Star Wars" and was made in about four hours time (over a period of weeks). Eric got most of his materials from Crafty Fox on the Alcosta Mall in San Ramon, picked up cardboard from around the house, utilized parts of old binoculars, plastic knobs and tape donated by his dad.

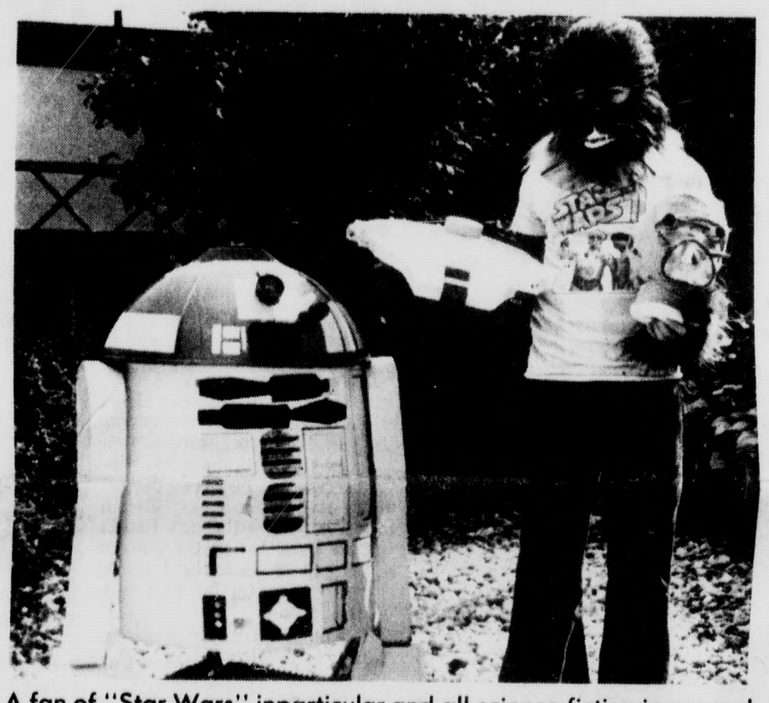
The Tusken raider head took just a half-hour to complete and is made largely of cloth.

He hopes to sell some of the "Star Wars" items so he can use the money to construct other ape and creature items.

Though he and his family are moving to Sacramento in the near future, Eric plans to continue his study of science-fiction.

And, who knows, someday he just might be helping create those spectacular robots, costumes and masks that have helped make "Star Trek" and "Star Wars" goliaths of the 20th century science-fiction realm.

— by Al Fischer



A fan of "Star Wars" inparticular and all science-fiction in general, young Eric Bergh poses with replicas of movie classic items he constructed.

State PTA head blasts kids' TV habits

PLEASANTON — "We in the PTA believe the amount of television a child views affects him at school. The average child watches TV more hours than he's in school, and when this happens the 'curriculum' that comes over the tube becomes quite important."

Virginia Macy, president of the California State PTA, told an audience of Diablo Chapter, Phi Delta Kappa, last night that it should be the responsibility of the parent to determine what and how many hours of TV a child can view.

A resident of Whittier, Mrs. Macy has served as a teacher, high school and community college trustee during her educational career. She has received awards from the League of Women Voters, AAUW, and PTA.

Her PTA service includes membership in the National PTA Commission on TV Violence.

Municipal court is big business: $1.2 million

This is the second of a two-part series on municipal court by Times reporter Connie Rux. The first installment gave annual statistics in the various divisions.

LIVERMORE — What is a municipal court? Most people think of traffic citations or small claims. Livermore has had a municipal court since 1970. Prior to that year it was a justice court.

A justice court can become a municipal court when the population reaches 40,000.

Then in 1975 Pleasanton joined, and it became the Livermore Pleasanton Municipal Court. The judicial district extends east to the San Joaquin County line and north of Highway 580 to the Contra Costa County line.

The municipal court takes in $1.2 million a year in revenue, which is split among the cities, county and state, said George E. Meese court administrator.

The presiding judge this year is Judge Mark L. Eaton. The title is rotated annually between Judge Eaton and Judge John A. Lewis. Occasionally two retired judges, Judge William Gale and Judge Joseph Schenone, will help with case loads. Local attorneys also help as pro tem judges for traffic and small claim cases. The extra judicial help is needed in times of heavy case loads and when a judge is on vacation, Meese explained.

Meese added that for the number of filings in Livermore-Pleasanton Judicial District, the judicial council weighted case load shows Livermore-Pleasanton should have 3.5 judges (or 4 judges).

"This means we are disposing of more cases per judge than average," Meese said. "Part of this can be attributed to the district attorney and public defender working closely together and with the judge to settle cases."

The judges have instituted pretrial hearings where, after a person pleads not guilty, the defense and prosecuting attorneys discuss what is being contested with the judge and a trial date is set.

The judges also have jury trial readiness days every Friday. The judge calls in all involved parties, defense and prosecuting attorneys and defendent, to see that all are ready for trial. If there is a change, court calendar can be changed at that point before the regular trial days.

The criminal division hndles all misdemeanor cases, including drunk driving, hit and run and some drug charges, known as the "wobblers." Wobblers are cases where, depending on the particular case, charges can be filed as a felony or a misdemeanor.

The court has traffic school for some persons found guilty of certain traffic violations. And there is a school for "driving under the influence" for those convicted of drunk drivin. The court keeps a list of such schools from all over the state. Even if a person from Long Beach is cited here, he is sent a form from the Livermore-Pleasanton Municipal Court and given the names of schools in his area. The form is to be filled out and returned as proof of completion of the school.

New leads in Orinda slaying

ORINDA — Authorities late Thursday night said they were questioning a person in connection with the bludgeon-slaying of a 61-year-old Orinda woman.

The woman, Elizabeth Travis, was found dead in her hillside home at 99 Acacia Drive Wednesday morning.

Contra Costa Sheriff's deputies were tight-lipped Thursday night and would not reveal details about the person they said they were questioning.

Earlier, officers feared the killer knew the identity of their only witness, a Samoan housemaid.

The woman reported for work Wednesday morning, hung up her purse in the laundry room of the three bedroom home.

Before she could notice blood smeared on floors and walls, she said a man in a mask leaped at her from the patio a few steps away. The woman wrestled free and fled in terror.

Traffic control for SR

Efforts to get better traffic control to protect childrens' safety along Broadmoor Drive in San Ramon received another boost from Contra Costa county's board of supervisors.

Residents living along Broadmoor Drive organized to get groundmounted stop signs at the intersections of Broadmoor Drive and South Bellemeade Drive, Northland Avenue and Westchester Drive. Residents are hopeful these signs will provide areas for children to cross safely; especially going to and from school.

Other requests were for crosswalks at these intersections plus more 25-mile-an-hour speed signs along 2.2 mile Broadmoor.

Supreme Court aide

Parents proud of son

Eric Andersen, son of Mr. and Mrs. Mark Eldon Andersen of 1584 Foothill Rd. in Pleasanton, has been appointed to clerk for. U.S- Supreme Court Justi Lewis F. Powell, Jr.

This marks the second year in a row that a graduate of the J.Reuben Clark Law School at Brigham Young University has been named as a law clerk to a High Court Justice.

Andersen is now working as law clerk for Judge J. Clifford Wallace of the U.S. Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals in California. While at Brigham Young University in Provo, Utah, Mark was a member of the managing board for the BYU Law Review.

He filled a mission for the Latterday Saints Church to Denmark in 1969-71.

Andersen's wife, Katherine Hardy Andersen, graduated cum laude in the first graduating class of the Law School, and last year was an attorney with The LDS Church Development Office.

Rex E. Lee, dean of the BYU Law School, stated, "We are profoundly gratified at this selection and proud of Eric Andersen for his accomplishments. The placing of two graduates from the first two classes of a new law school as Supreme Court law clerks is truly a unique accomplishment."

According to a story in the Provo, Utah newspaper on Andersen's appointment, only 51 of 160 accredited law schools in the history of legal ducation have ever had a graduate serve as a Supreme Court law clerk.

Lee noted that such appointments are the most sought-after for law graduates across the country. The competition is intense and appointment is a universally recognized honor.

Andersen received a Stephen L. Richards Scholarship at BYU, the most prestigious scholarship awarded by the J. Reuben Clark Law School.

Andersen, whose appointment was given prominent mention in the LDS newspaper and daily publications in Salt Lake City and Provo, is the older brother of Brad, a 1971 graduate of Amador and AllNorthern California prep football selection, David, a 1973 graduate, and Lisa and Roger, students at Foothill High School.

Eric will commence duties in the office of Justice Powell in the fall of 1978.

Sgt. Janet Flood believes her coloring book gets important Crime Prevention messages across at "child's level"

A colorful warning for little children

LIVERMORE — The big-eyed little characers stare smilingly out of the pages of the coloring book. The words and pictures are simple, but the message is very clear: children should avoid friendly strangers.

The coloring books will be given away during Livermore Crime Prevention Week, Oct. 8-15 through Home Savings and the special Crime Prevention vans at various locations.

The quiet creator of the characters is a deputy sheriff with the Alameda County Sheriff's Department. "If a simplified cartoon like this, along with the parents' help, can make the children understand the importance of not going with strangers, then even if one tragedy can be prevented it will be worth the effort," says Sgt. Janet Flood.

She modestly disclaimed credit for the coloring book, which she worked in cooperation with Sgt. Donald Lee of Livermore police and Dottie Sladky, crime prevention committee member, and fellow deputy Sgt. Duane Gull. "All I did was donate the pictures," she says, smiling. Sgt. Flood has done a children's book called "Traceables," which is a complete drawing kit for kids, with plastic overlays. Although she lives in Hayward, she decided to do the book for Livermore when Mrs. Sladky contacted her about the idea "because I have an interest in kids."

"But this book isn't just for Livermore or for any one police or sheriff's department," emphasizes the deputy who works in juvenile division. "It's for all children everywhere. The message is one we need to get across to children everywhere."

Besides cartoons dealing with strangers, the coloring book also talks about taking care of toys and bicycles so they don't get stolen, learning to cross streets safely and the danger of playing with matches. The theme throughout the little book emphasizes that policemen are friends who can help a child who is lost or in trouble.

A coloring contest will be sponsored during Crime Prevention Week.

Local attorney goes to advisory committee

A local attorney, Ms. Patty Grossman, has been named to the Alameda County post sentence advisory committee by the board of supervisors.

A Pleasanton resident practicing law in Livermore, Grossman will join the 10 member committee when it begins work evaluating the needs of a proposed new sherriff's facility and jail at Santa Rita.

She was nominated by supervisor Valerie Raymond and approved Wednesday.

Grossman is a partner with attorney John Staley and emphasizes family and criminal law and business relations in her practice.

She was a Phi Beta Kappa graduate of UC Berkeley and graduated from the Golden Gate University law school in 1974. Her husband, Alan, is an attorney in Pleasanton.

Grossman is also is a member of the California Womens Lawyer's Club, the California Trial Lawyers Association, the League of Women Voters and the National Womens Political Caucus.

Canal will affect south bay waters

MARTINEZ — Contra Costa County's board of supervisors have been notified the quantity and quality of fresh water flows from the Sacramento-San Joaquin Delta will affect south San Francisco Bay and north bay.

J.B. Gilbert and Associates officials told supervisors yesterday the Gilbert planning and engineering consulting firm is completing a study for the county on change s resulting from construction of the Peripheral Canal.

Dr. Don L. Feuerstein said the Gilbert firm has been putting together results of previous studies on San Francisco Bay flushing flows. The firm expects to have its own evaluations ready in time for use in the hearings to be held in November by a joint legislative committee. This committee is considering a revivl of the state water bill.

Feuerstein said the crux of the issue, however, lies in the effect of outflows on the bio-system, which no one has yet been able to determine.

The above statement prompted Supervisor Nancy Fahden to declare, "We have been making a political issue out of a scientific issue. We must be able to say to the Governor — Hey, we're going too fast on making plans to divert fresh water around the Delta.

Stark doesn't need the extra money

Congressman Pete Stark (D-Oakland) will receive an additional $12,610 next year for increased office expenses, but a spokesman indicated no immediate need for the money.

House members last week voted 215 to 193 to change the formula which fixes the amount each representative receives for office expenses. Each member could get funds ranging from $4,000 to $14,000 from a total package estimated at $3.4 million.

The House Administration Committee said the increase in the office allowance was needed to aid members faced with high rents in big cities and those who maintain several offices in sprawling districts.

Stark, the Valley's Congressional representative, currently operates two offices, one in Livermore and the other in Oakland. There are five full-time case workers, including one in Livermore, and three part-time employes: a public relations representative, an office worker, and an administrator.

Last year Stark's office received $18,915 in office expense funds. The increase will push next year's total to $31,525.

A spokesman in Stark's office said there wre no plans to increase the staff or open a third office. The money could be used for office materials as well as opening a new office, the spokesman said.

The total bill for a House member's annual operation, including salaries and other allowances, will fall in a range of $350,000 to $360,000.

Neutron bombed by local reps

Teller's name was invoked by the weapon's primary defender, Rep. Tom Downey (D-New York). Downey said Teller had a theory — known as "the second firebreak theory" — which might provide a rationale for the neutron warhead.

As presented by Downey, the theory poses the possibility of an invasion by the Soviet Union of Western Europe. It holds that if the U.S. decides it wants to use nuclear weapons for defensive purposes, it might be able to prevent a world - wide conflagration from breaking out by making it clear to thp Soviets that we ill only use such weapons on friendly (Western European) soil.

If the Soviets accept that intention, it might not resort to launching its own nuclear weapons, the theory holds. In that case, Teller argued, the kind of nuclear weapon the U.S. would want would be a neutron warhead. Especially useful in an area that has been evacuated, it would cause relatively little damage to allies.

Downey said, "I'm not sure this theory is right, but" coming from a man of Teller's stature, "it deserves our consideration."

Other members of the House criticized the theory as so much speculation, as the description of only one of many scenarios that might arise out of the hurry and confusion of a military situation.

Rep. Elizabeth Holtzman (D-New York), referring to Teller as a "man whose understanding of human behavior has yet to be demonstrated," said other scenarios are more likely. She claimed specifically that a chemical called Carbon 14, which results from a neutron warhead explosion, could under some weather conditions have a devasting effect on the U.S.'s own troops.

But Holtzman and a dozen other House liberals emphasized their belief that a debate on military tactics misses the point.

Maryland's Rep. Barbara Mikulski (D) painted a gory and detailed medical description of the slow, agonizing death that would result from neutron radiation poisoning.

Said Contra Costa County's Rep. George Miller (D), "I can only argue it from deep in my stomach." He said that listening to the debate made him "for the first time" — pessimistic about the future.

Miller spoke movingly of trying to explain nuclear weapons to his children, and he challenged the House to remember that the U.S. was the first country to use nucelear weapons. . . "when they were dirty."

After the weapon was approved, the House rejected on a voice vote a so-called compromise amendment that would have given the Congress another chance to review neutron weapons after a formal presidential decision had been made. Conservatives had no interest in the measure, and liberals argued that the amendment offered nothing that didn't already exist.

Finally, Rep. John Burton (D-Marin County) offered an amendment that would have prohibited expenditure of funds on production or research on a neutron weapon "unless it is designed to destroy property without causing harm to huaman beings and other living things."

Responding to what he said was a charge that the amendment was "kind of stupid," Burton said, "Not as stupid as the bomb itself."

The amendment lost without a recorded vote.

She said the primary way to get at the networks is through the local station licensee. Mrs. Macy felt the problem rested in part with the fact the networks are major purveyors of programs and they have the bulk of advertising to support them.

Speaking on curriculum, the mother of four grown children said there is a need for more courses on parenting.

Responding to a question on the rising tide of regulations and paper work, Mrs. Macy alleged that "we're (school districts) so eager for the special program dollars that we're willing to swallow all the regulations."

Foothill NMS winner named

PLEASANTON — Six seniors at Foothill High School have achieved commended student status in the 23rd annual National Merit Scholarship Program.

Letters of commendation were presented by principal Richard Carroll to Leslie Butterfield, Donald Capreta, Sandra Hedrick, Paul Holbrook, Jay LaFontaine, and Tony Zavanelli.

This honor is the result of each student's outstanding performance on the Preliminary Scholastic Aptitude Test/National Merit Scholarship Qualifying Test (PSAT/NMSQT) which was administered nationwide to high school juniors in October, 1976.

A total of approximately 35,000 commended students throughout the United States are being honored by the National Merit Scholarship Corporation which administers the yearl scholarship competition. Students in this group represent less tham two per cent of the total of graduating U.S. secondary school seniors.

Commended students do not continue in the Merit Scholarship competition, but to increase their opportunities for college admission and financial aid NMSC has offered each an opportunity to have identifying information sent by the corporation to two higher education institutions selected by the student.

In addition, NMSC makes it possible for all regionally accredited U.S. college and universities to receive home addresses for commended students, on a cost basis, so that an institution may contact any of these promising young men and women directly.

Suspect questioned

She told police she left her purse hanging on the wall, but when officers got to the house — it was gone. Deputies said the assailant may have taken it.

If he did, he knows who the witness is, one lawman indicated.

Elizabeth Travis's body was found not more than 15 feet from where the assailant and housemaid struggled. A bloody brick was found near the body, although authorities say several weapons may have been used in the assault.

A source close to the investigation said the housewife identified her assailant as a man, but investigators were exploring the possibility the attacker may have been a woman or a youth.

There were at least three major attacks on the older woman before she died, said the source. Blood was found near the front door at the west end of the building, on the wall and floor of the laundry room at the east end, and another pool of blood on the patio.

Bits of a ceramic figurine were still visible Thursday near the front door of the single-story home. The source said a board, a brick, and a flowerpot may have been used in the attack.

Investigators found no evidence of forced entry nor ransacking in the house.

An autopsy on the body Thursday revealed death was due to a blow to the head. — by Mark Young

Stop signs slated for Broadmoor Drive

SAN RAMON — The Contra Costa county board of supervisors ok'd a Public Works Department recommendation to put up stop signs and other traffic control devices at certain Broadmoor Drive intersections on a six-month trial basis.

The public works recommendation was spurred by requests from San Ramon homeowners living along Broadmoor Drive. Mark Kermit, deputy public works director for the county, said supervisors reached their agreement Tuesday.

Broadmoor Drive has been noted for having hazardous traffic conditions. This threat to children's lives spurred residents along Broadmoor Drive to organize into the Save Our Children Association (SOCA).

SOCA members said their principle aim was to protect childrens' lives; especially as they walk to and from schools. They contended stop signs at the intersections of Broadmoor Drive and South Bellemeade Drive, Northland Avenue and Westchester Drive would insure this protection by giving children a chance to cross when traffic was forced to halt.

During a public forum Sept. 14 at California High School, SOCA members, backed by the San Ramon Homeowners Association, presented the stop sign request to public works officials. Other requests were for crosswalks at those intersections plus more 25-mile-an-hour speed limit signs along 2.2 mile Broadmoor Drive.

Public Works Department officials Leroy Vukad and Kermit agreed to comply with requests from SOCA, SRHA and others attending the forum. Vukad is county traffic engineer in the transportation division of public works.

Also attending the forum were San Ramon homeowners, officials from law enforcement agencies and schools.

At that meeting, SOCA formally disbanded and turned over the responsibility for pursuing the traffic control problem to the San Ramon Homeowners Association (SRHA).

Vukad and Kermit said they would recommend the requests to the board of supervisors.

The ground-mounted stop signs, crosswalks and speed limit signs will be going in shortly, according to Kermit.

During the six-month trial period the intersections will be periodically monitored by the public works department to see if their traffic control objective is being reached.

Kermit and Vukad cautioned those attending the forum that ground-mounted stop signs often caused speeders to increase their speed between signs. This situation often causes more problems than it solves, they claimed.

SOCA members reiterated that reducing speed was not their primary objective; providing safe crossings for children was the chief aim. They said they realized speeding, reckless driving, etc. was a law enforcement problem — not a public works department problem.

Law enforcement officals pointed out their manpower shortage made it difficult to patrol as efficiently as they would like to at all times.

Kermit said the intersections will have three or four way ground-mounted stop signs "as the case may be."

"Crosswalks will have to be painted white unless the intersection comes within 600 feet of school property," Kermit explained. "That's the state law."

Kermit pointed out his office tried to do what was best for the community.

"But we have to operate within the limits of our profession. Sometimes a layman thinks something is good and will work but a professional in the field knows it won't. The difference is between what a layman perceives and what a professional with experience knows will work."

He said when Broadmoor Drive went in, the public works department had wanted housing to be built on backup lots (backs of houses face street).

"Aesthetically that might not look good, even with a fence, but from a traffic handling standpoint it would have been better."

He added that in a fast-growth area such as San Ramon Valley, poor planning can bring on traffic and other problems.

Part of Broadmoor Drive's problem, according to Kermit, is the fact it is a collector street. He said there were three main types of streets.

"They are residential, collectors and arterial. Residential streets feed into collectors, collectors take all that traffic then feed it into arterials."

Arterials often have four lanes, islands, and traffic signals, Kermit said. Alcosta Boulevard is an arterial high capacity road.

Scenic freeway strips pondered by Pleasanton

PLEASANTON — Thousand-foot belts of land along both sides of I-580 and I-680 as they cross the city will become state "Scenic Corridors" if city planning commissioners give the program the nod.

Commissioners will consider a city council resolution to adopt the freeway protection program at their Oct 12 meeting.

If adopted as city ordinance, 1,000-foot rights-of-way along both sides of the freeways will be protected by a series of standards and controls.

The program is part of a statewide effort to preserve vistas from highrise and blight. Signs emblazoned with golden poppies, the state flower, will bloom along designated freeways throughout the state.

The ordinance would cover design, screening, height, bulk, sign placement, development review procedures "and other considerations intended to protect the scenic qualities of the corridor," according to staff report.

A negative Environmental Impact Report has been filed. Comments will be accepted through Oct. 5.

Fairboard terms earn wary nod

OAKLAND — The 16 year limit on county fair director's terms proposed as part of a new, modified arrangement between Alameda County and the county fair board is a little more than Supervisor Valerie Raymond cares for, but she can live with it.

Raymond, the Valley's supervisor, and Supervisor Fred Cooper of Alameda, have been negotiating with the fair board over contents of a five year contract and items related to it.

One of the more important related items, to be resolved before the contract is signed, is the length of fair directors' terms.

All but five of the 21 directors are "private directors", that is, they were chosen for their position by others on the board. It has been this way since the fair began in the 1930's.

The other five seats go to appointees of county supervisors, a tradition begun, by written agreement, in 1963.

Many of the fair directors have been on the board a long time and they think that 16 years is a good limit on their term. From the time of the new agreement, not from the time they first began serving.

Raymond doesn't mind counting from this year, but she would prefer 10 year terms. That's all she will allow anyone she appoints. She feels that shorter terms are conducive to more public input to the fair by insuring more turnover on the board.

However, she can live with a 16 year limit. "It's somewhat different than other county commissions; it has actual operating responsibilities," said Raymond, feeling that maybe long -term continuity can be beneficial in this case.

Raymond also wants the current number of five supervisor - appointed directors increased to 10, giving each supervisor two appointments. Raymond thinks that would also increase public input into the fair operations.

The fair board is willing to have double the number o supervisorial appointees, but wants the board increased five members to 26 rather than cut any of its own current slots. Raymond is agreeable to that.

New Town knocked

OAKLAND — An urban group concerned with revitalizing Oakland has congratulated the Alameda County Board of Supervisors for its rejection of Harlan Geldermann's proposed New Town.

United Neighbors in Action said in a press release that the board's decision "is a victory for community people. Las Positas would have had a terrible effect on the environment of all of the East Bay and on the housing and unemployment problems of older areas of Alameda County."

UNA said that "what we need are reinvestment strategies and resources that benefit our existing urban areas. We do not need projects that reap profits for developers of vacant land." "We have thousands of homes to rehabilitate in our inner - city areas.

Food stamp overhaul

Sweeping farm bill gets Carter's okay

By FRANK CORMIER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter signed an $11 billion farm bill Thursday, hailing it as a "great boon" to farmers and consumers alike.

"As a farmer myself," Carter said at a Rose Garden ceremony, he was pleased to sign what he termed the most farreaching agricultural legislation in 40 years.

The new law boosts grain farmers' incomes, revamps the federal food stamp program and expands agricultural research while continuing and revising virtually every statute administered by the Agriculture Department.

Although the food stamp and price support sections will be costly to taxpayers, experts say the measure's immediate effect on prices at the supermarket will be minimal.

The legislation contains about $2 billion more than Carter originally requested. However, he said the final, compromise version was only $300 million more than he later had in mind.

Congress and the Ford and Carter administrations worked nearly three years to prepare the bill, which will be in effect for the next four years. Heralding it as a cooperative venture, the President praised members of Congress of both parties, nutritionists and consumers for helping to shape the final product.

The law tightens food stamp eligibility requirements for families with incomes above the official poverty level, while increasing aid to families with incomes under the poverty level.

Carter said the revised food stamp plan is simple, fair and easy to administer and will remove a "pervasive threat of fraud."

Price support sections of the law guarantee minimum prices farmers can get for their crops — "a giant step toward tying target prices to production costs," said Carter.

This will boost federal outlays by up to $4.4 billion a year while the food stamp program will cost $5.6 billion annually, the administration says.

The House completed congressional action on the compromise version of the bill Sept. 16. The Senate approved it Sept. 9.

Actual spending on crop-related programs depends primarily on the weather in this country and in other major crop-exporting nations.

But whatever it adds up to, Carter declared it will be "a great boon not only to American farmer families but to anyone who consumes our products."

Tony T. Dechant, president of the National Farmers Union, issued a statement saying the new law will not stem farm unrest, despite its improvement in the minimum price support levels.

"No one should expect farm unrest to fade away now that the farm bill has been signed," warned Dechant. "Protests will erupt and likely accelerate until something positive is done either administratively or by Congress to bolster farm prices and income."

Blood bank visits soon

LIVERMORE — Get ready to roll up your sleeves — the mobile unit of the blood bank of the Alameda - Contra Costa Medical Association will be in town Tuesday from 2 p.m. until 6:30 p.m.

The mobile blood bank will be at the Recreation Hall at Eighth and South H streets in Livermore.

The Association helps supply blood to the 35 hospitals in the two counties. Persons between the ages of 18 and 65 are urged to donate blood; 17-year-olds need the written consent of a parent or guardian.

Seat swap seen

OAKLAND — The migration of judges from Oakland's superior court to the new courtrooms in Hayward will prove to be a boon to County Administrator Loren Enoch's staff.

The county administrator's staff has been cramped in offices on the fifth floor of the county administration building. There will be five courtrooms vacated — four in the old 1930's - era building across the street and one in the new one where Enoch has his offices.

Enoch commented that in the shuffle of rooms, the "more senior judges desire to reside" in the newer building. Resoponding to a supervisor's question about whether supervisors can get involved in space assingment, County Counsel Richard Moore said they can indeed. All the law says is that they assign "suitable rooms" to the judges.

Enoch will do a study of his staff's space needs, remodeling costs and how long the new offices would serve him well, then report to the board.

That's a bunch o' Blarney

Dublin Chamber of Commerce Vice-President Dave Burton left, presents an official chamber blarney stone to Jeans n' Things owners Paul Gray, center, and Hanna Gray, far right, during grand opening ceremonies. The store is open Monday through Saturday from 10 a.m. to 5:30 p.m.; Friday, from 10 a.m. to 8:30 p.m. Jeans n' Things features the latest in denim and coordinates for gals, jeans for guys, junior sizes 3-13; Misses sizes 8-18 and "the best fit in the valley," according to the Grays.

D.A., public defender face check of offsetting funds

OAKLAND — Alameda County taxpayers pay their district attorney's office $6.5 million per year to prosecute criminal cases and pay the public defender's office another $6.5 million to defend some of them.

Concerned about the rising costs in this segment of the county's criminal justice system, county supervisors this week authorized County Administrator Loren Enoch to go ahead with a management study designed to cut the rising costs.

Staff members serving the public defender, district attorney and county administrator will take part in the study. They will be aided by an outside consultant who will cost no more than $7,500, said Enoch.

Objectives of the study are : define the existing policies, procedures, and state mandates which affect the situation; establish criteria for determining appropriate staffing levels for prosecutionan and defense services; review the internal management of the prosecution and defense services and recommend possible improvements; and conduct a cost benefit analysis of the public defender process and recommend potential improvements.

The study will begin late in October and should be ready by February, said Enoch. He first called the board's attention to the situation in the message prefacing this year's budget.

Amador career center to hear OSU guest

A representative of Oregon State University will be the first of a series of speakers to meet with students and parents at Amador Valley High School in Pleasanton.

The representative will be in the career center Monday at 11 a.m. Other college representatives scheduled next week are those from Holy Names, Thursday at 9 a.m., and University of Pacific, Thursday at 11:30 a.m., and University of Santa Clara, Friday at 11:40 a.m.

Nora Doherty,career center specialist, has also noted that Amador will be a test center for the SAT and achivement tests. Dec. 3 and May 6, 1978 will be the only testing dates for European history, world cultures, Hebrew, Latin, and Russian. The English composition test with essay will be offered only on Dec. 3.

SAT and achivement tests cannot be taken on the same day.

Regular registration for the next test date (Nov. 5) is Sept. 30. Late registration deadline is Oct. 14 for Nov. 5 testing.

For the Dec. 3 testing, regular registration deadline is Oct. 28 and late registration deadline is Nov. 11.

For the Jan. 28, 1978, testing, the regular registration date is Dec. 23 and late registration deadline is Jan. 6, 1978.

ATP fees for 1977-78 are $7.25 for the Scholastic Aptitude Test (SAT), $12.50 for one, two or three achivement tests taken on one test date. Late registration fee is $4.

Amador Valley High is the only official test center for Valley students.

Noting the impending visit of college representatives, Ms. Doherty says there are significant changes in financial aid procedures and deadlines. Parents of students are encouraged to come and hear the speakers.

California High School in San Ramon has also announced visitations from representatives of various colleges and universitys.

Cal High will hold a College Fair Night Tuesday, Oct. 11, from 7:30 to 10 p.m.

Students and parents from the Amador and Livermore districts are invited to attend.

School reps are expected from the various state university and University of California systems, California College of Arts and Crafts, College of Notre Dame, Heald Engineering, Holy Names, Menlo College, Mills College, St. Mary's, University of San Francisco, Whitworth, Linfield, Pepperdine, Heald Business College, Diablo Valley, and reps of the various branches of military service.

Top state officials get raise

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Gov. Edmund Brown Jr. has approved the first pay raise in eight years for top state elected officials, but he trimmed the pay plan before signing it.

The measure, signed shortly before midnight Tuesday, grants one-time pay raises of $2,831 to $7,500 a year to 10 top elected officials, excluding the governor.

The pay raises, beginning January 1979, affect the attorney general, lieutenant governor, controller, treasurer, secretary of state, superintendent of public instruction and members of the Board of Equalization.

Brown vetoed a section of the bill which would have granted annual cost of living raises of up to five per cent in future years to the same 10 elected officials, plus the governor.

The Democratic governor had repeatedly said he would not sign legislation increasing his own $49,100 annual salary, and his action on the proposed raises for other officials was in doubt until the last minute.

The new pay scales raise the attorney general's salary by $5,000 to $47,500 and boost salaries for the lieutenant governor, secretary of state, controller, treasurer and superintendent of public instruction by $7,500 each to $42,500.

The chairman of the Board of Equalization gets a $2,831 raise to $38,500 and members of the board are raised $4,034 each to $38,000.

The bill is SB 884 by Sen. Albert Rodda, D-Sacramento.

New member welcome

Buena Vista 4-H Club in Livermore will be registering new members at its next meeting Monday, Oct. 10 at Jackson Avenue School from 7 p.m. to 8:30 p.m. The club meets th second Monday of each month, with interest groups in sewing, cooking, arts, dog training and various farm animals meeting during the month. Adults are needed to lead the small groups. Especially in demand are teachers in photography, flying and leather craft. For more information call Pat Cooper, 447-9572, or Ray Zimmer, 447-2136 Shown here, from left to right, are: Lisa Paulo, Shannon Conner, Terri Ambrosino, Mary Cooper and Michael Ambrosino.

Family ties

Five generations of one area family got together recently for a rare family reunion in the home of Dolores Hoover in Pleasanton. Shown here from left to right is baby Ryan Matthew Dahlheim, who's only a couple of weeks old, and mom (left) Becky Dahlheim, a 1977 graduate of Amador High. Ryan's grandmother, Dolores Hoover, is at the far right. The next generation is great-grandfather, Dave Gardner, who came in from Ojai, Calif., and great-great grandmother, Mary Gardner, who is 99 years old. Baby Ryan, incidentally, has four grandparents, seven great grand-parents and one great-great grandparent. And that means a lot of birthday gifts !

Near 'Miss'

Jamie Bemis, a 15-year-old Foothill High sophomore from Pleasanton has been namd first runner up in the Miss California Teen pageant, held Sept. 24 in Anaheim. Jamie, who hopes to become a professional dancer, did a jazz dance performance to "Rhapsody in Blue" as part of the pageant's talent contest. As part of the contest, in which she competed against teens from all over California, Jamie had to participate in speech, talent, gown and swimsuit competitions.

Wine label hearings

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government's lengthy effort to label what's inside a wine bottle has concluded another chapter with two days of hearings in Washington and now moves to San Francisco.

The Treasury Department's Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms more than a year ago proposed a special government seal for wine that met especially strict labeling standards.

But this idea was scuttled after strong opposition was expressed at hearings last February. Critics said they were concerned that consumers would mistake the seal for a guarantee of quality.

Then in June, the government came up with proposed rules to require that wines labeled as coming from a specific location contain a minimum amount of wine from that location. Wines that give no such claim as to origin would be exempt from the requirement.

The proposed rules also would forbid the use of foreign language terms that refer to quality or to the condition of grapes at the time of harvest.

Varietal wines, those made from a single kind of grape, would have to derive at least 75 per cent of their volume from the type of grape listed on the label.

A proposal that the government require all ingredients, including water, to be listed on a wine bottle's label was considered and discarded more than two years ago.

A spokesman for the Treasury bureau said wines imported into the United States from abroad as well as domestic varieties would be affected by the labeling standards.

The hearings will resume Nov. 1 and 2 in San Francisco. They will be followed by a 60-day period during which written comments will be accepted before the final regulations are drawn up and put into effect, the spokesman said.

Farm preservation bill will define prime land

By JOE BIGHAM
Associated Press Writer

FRESNO (AP) — A better definition of agriculture land will be incorporated into a farmland preservation bill the California Legislature will consider next year, its sponsor said Thursday.

Assemblyman Victor Calvo, D-Mountain View, outlined the bill before his Assembly Committee on Resources, Land Use and Energy took testimony for and against it.

Calvo's measure would establish a state Agricultural Resources Council to prepare initial maps of "prime" and "unique" farmland. That council would adopt advisory guidelines to help cities and counties develop their own programs to preserve farmland and review and approve individual local plans to preserve such land.

Some amendments are being contemplated before the bill reaches a vote in 1978, Calvo said.

"We have to develop a more precise definition of agricultural land," he noted. "We are asking the state Food and Agriculture Department to recommend such a definition to the Legislature. We will have it this fall and expect to incorporate the language into the bill."

Calvo also said some compromise is possible in the composition of the state council. Under his bill, the membership would be composed of three representatives each from cities, counties and the public plus the state agriculture director and the state resources secretary.

Calvo's bill, AB 1900, will compete with a measure merged Wednesday by Sens. John Garamendi, D-Mokelumne Hill and George Zenovich, DFresno, from separate bills they had authored.

Their legislation, SB 193, stresses local government control and is supported by the California Farm Bureau, the Cattlemen's Association, state Chamber of Commerce and the County Supervisors Association.

Calvo's bill would give the state council stronger authority. It is supported by conservationists who contend strong state control is needed because local government has done a poor job of preserving agricultural land.

During Thursday's hearing, Assemblyman Gordon Duffy, RHanford, asked for a study to make certain Calvo's legislation includes provisions to allow agriculture-related industries such as cotton gins and wineries in areas preserved for farming.

Fresno County officials told the committee how they have tightened controls on development in farming areas in recent years. Fresno has made progress in limiting urban growth to areas immediately surrounding cities, said Kerry McCants of the county planning department.

However, Assemblyman Richard Lehman, D-Fresno, warned that a county's policy could shift with changes in the makeup of the board of supervisors.

"The policy in Fresno is subject to change any time the board changes, which is why we need such legislation," he said.

County board weighs tax relief proposals

OAKLAND — A couple of property tax relief bills in the Legislature are getting the eye from the Alameda County Board of Supervisors.

County Administrator Loren Enoch told the board this week that Senate Constitutional Amendment 29 and Senate Bill 514 are moving along on schedule.

SBA 29 and SB 514, both authored by Sen. Milton Marks of San Francisco, work together to establish a property tax exemption for rehabilitated residential property. SCA 29 has been approved by the Legislature and will face the voters in the primary election in 1978. SB 514 was approved by the Legislature and is on the governor's desk.

Club news to submit?

Valley clubs and organizations can submit news of upcoming meetings and events to be printed in the Times' Club Capsules page, which appears each Friday.

Deadline for submitting notices to the Lifestyle Department is Wednesday at noon for the upcoming Friday edition.

Club and events notices, especially those not open to the public, will be printed only as space permits. Send news items typed, if possible, on an 8½ by 11 sheet of paper, and include the date, time, place, cost and sponsor of the event.

Local club publicity chairpersons may send for a Times pamphlet, "Helpful Hints for Publicity Coordinators," which details how news should be submitted for release to the media.

For a copy, write the Times' Lifestyle Department at the Livermore office, 1916 Second St., or the Pleasanton office, 126 Spring St., or call 462-4160.

Scouts get ready

"All Aboard for Scouting" is the theme of this year's Boy Scout membership drive. Boys 8 to 14 are invited to join. Registration in the Twin Valley Scout District is scheduled at neighborhood schools Thursday, Oct. 6 at 7:30 p.m.

Prospective scouts and parents will have the opportunity to activities offered. Members of the Toastmaster Clubs will assist the scouts in their presentations.

Boys between the ages of 8 and 10 are eligible for membership in the Cub Scouts. Older boys join the Boy Scouts. For more information call Janet Cornell, 443-2547, or Shirley Slabaugh, 462-4613, or 462-6060. Schools where boys can register for Cub or Boy Scouts in Livermore are Rincon, Christensen, Mitchell, Smith and Sonoma. Cub Scout only is at Jackson Avenue, Fifth Street, Sunset II, Arroyo Seco and Portola. Boy Scout only will be at St. Michaels.

In Pleasanton Cub and Boy Scout registration will be at Walnut Grove. Cub only registration will be at Fairlands and Alisal.

In Dublin registration for all ages is at Murray, Frederiksen, Lydiksen, Donlon and Cronin. Registration for Cub Scouts will also be at Dublin and Nielsen schools.

Statesmen sing

The Livermore Golden Statesmen chapter of the Society for the Preservation and Encouragement of Barbershop Quartet Singing in America makes its first public appearance of the fall season on Saturday, Oct. 1 as part of the Festival '77 program.

Kids' fun in YMCA

Twin Valley YMCA Kinder-Gym classes will start Tuesday and Thursday, Oct. 4 and 6, for children who'd like to be involved in creative movement and exercise.

Charlene Wenig and Pat Rebmann will teach the classes, which are for toddlers 18 months through three years of age and their mothers.

The basic concept of Kinder-Gym is movement education and a challenge to the child's creative capacity.

Classes for children 18 months to 24 months will be on Tuesdays from 9 a.m. to 10 a.m., or from 10:15 a.m. to 11:15 a.m. (whichever is more convenient for most mothers) starting Oct. 4. Classes for children from two to three years old will be Thursday mornings at the same times, starting Oct 6. Classes are held at Pleasanton Greens on Vineyard Avenue in Pleasanton, and fees are $7.50 per month for members, and $9 for non-members. A yearly membership fee of $6 establishes membership status. For more information on reservations, which should be made as soon as possible, call 462-2211.

Workshops on health scheduled

This month, the Anthropos begins three special workshops dealing with different aspects of health.

Starting Oct. 6, an eight-week workshop will be offered for men and women interested in holistic health. "Touch for Health" is an approach to restore natural energies and to learn to possibly reduce the cost of medical care with preventive treatment.

Taught by Geri Meyer, who has a M.A. in counseling, and is a licensed marriage, family and child counselor, the class will be held Thursdays from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. at 1814 Catalina Court, Livermore. For information on fees and registration, call 443-1818.

Also offered through Anthropos is a "Think Slim, Be Slim" workshop focusing on nutrition, to be offered Thursdays from 1 to 3 p.m., at the above address. This class will also be taught by Geri Meyer. Participants will concentrate on setting goals, changing habits and releasing tension for the purpose of weight control.

One final special Anthropos session, "Women Into Sexual Health," will be slated to begin Mondays on Oct. 3 for six consecutive Monday evenings from 7:30 to 9:30. The groups will deal with sexual health and response, myths, communication, contraception and female sexuality.

The series will continue with different topics each week, including a couples' rap and therapy group.

Sanint Stroud, a licensed marriage, family and child counselor, will be the instructor in these sessions. For more information about the sexual health series, call Ms. Stroud at 4473353. Pre-registration for the series, which requires a $45 fee, is required.

Daughter's sea death prompts suit

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A San Anselmo woman has sued several persons involved with a sailboat that sank in choppy Pacific Ocean waters, prompting an ordeal at sea in which her daughter died.

Virginia Arthur filed suit in Superior Court here Wednesday — exactly one year after the 42-foot ketch "Spirit" unexpectedly pitched into the sea, forcing her daughter and five others to board life rafts.

Mrs. Arthur is seeking unspecified damages for the death of Camilla Arthur, 20.

Bound for Sausalito from Hawaii on the last leg of a pleasure voyage, the ketch suffered a sharp jolt and then sank in minutes.

Bus crash probe sees negligence

WASHINGTON (AP) — The failure of the driver of a charter bus to watch his brake pressure caused a bus crash which killed 29 persons near Martinez, last year, the National Transportation Safety Board concluded Thursday.

But it also criticized the highway design itself and the bus equipment.

The board said driver Evan Prothero failed to monitor airbrake pressure correctly, did not recognize there was a loss of air and did not take appropriate action, including putting on an emergency air brake, to negotiate a sharply curved freeway exit ramp on Interstate 680.

Twenty-eight students of the Yuba High School choir and the choir director's wife died when the 1950 Crown Coach schoolbus lost its brakes and plunged from the Marina Vista ramp and landed on its top more than 30 feet below.

Prothero and 22 other students were injured.

The board listed these factors as contributing to the accident and its severity:

— Maintenance and pre-trip inspection failed to detect and replace a deteriorated air-compressor drive belt, which broke between 30 and 90 minutes before the accident. Investigation showed the belt was at least 25 years old and could have been on the bus that long.

— The failure of the highway sign system "to adequately alert the driver to the critical geometrics of the ramp."

— The severity of the ramp's curve. "Had the curvature of the ramp been in compliance with the 1957 American Association of State Highway Officials specifications, the opportunity for the driver to negotiate the ramp would have been greatly improved," the report said.

— The design of the ramp curb as part of the ramp railing, which aided the bus in climbing onto the top face of the bridge parapet. The same bridge rail height without the curb structure might have redirected the bus back into the curve and prevented it from falling off the ramp, the board stated.

The board said the investigation showed that the 50-year-old Prothero, although he was a 20- year veteran of driving large trucks, had made only two previous bus trips and had never driven the type of bus involved in the accident.

It said his employer, Student Transportation Lines Inc., had not properly instructed him on operation of the vehicle before he left its Marysville terminal.

"It is difficult to understand why a driver with 20 years experience in air brake vehicles did not respond to the many clues associated with the degenerating service brake system during the last hour before the accident," the report said.

Post-crash laboratory studies determined that the service brake's air-compressor drive belt failed 30 to 90 minutes before the accident. It had been used "beyond its normal useful life and after it exhibited visible deteriorated conditions" which should have been spotted during both normal maintenance and a pre-trip inspection, the board said.

It said that the bus entered the exit-ramp curve at about 45 miles an hour and it was evident from tire marks left on the road "that the bus had some braking capability but not enough to slow it significantly."

Prothero told investigators he applied the mechanical hand brake when his service air brakes did not respond, but that he did not apply the emergency air brakes because he did not know the location of the emergency air lever.

Pre-teen dancing

Pre-teens can get involved in a new square dance class now being formed in Livermore. The Spin-a-ways are designed for children 8 to 12 years old, and will meet Thursday from 7 to 9 p.m. in the multi-purpose room at Rincon School.

Open registration lasts through Oct. 6, and the caller, Charlie Wolff, will start by teaching the basics of square dance methods.

'County' Fair?

Time was when the Alameda County Fair was one of those community ventures which drew little patronage, or attention, from outside this rural vale. The Oakland - based county government had its Flower Show, then later its beloved Raiders, and "that little fair at Pleasanton" was something for us local yokels to worry about.

Which we did, and quite well, thank you.

It was only as the Bernal Avenue show emerged as one of the biggest, and the finest, expositions of its kind in the western states that outsiders began to pay attention. Labor unions and politicians suddenly found new significance in our ponies, our pansies, and our ten million dollar yearly handle.

County government still doesn't know quite how to approach the Fair ... "Is it a money - maker we should glob onto?" ... "Supposing we just make them pay their own way without any support whatsoever from the county ... or even the state?"

Few years back, the county board of supervisors decided the least they could was to make their own appointments direct to the Fair Board. Trouble is, those appointments never really got involved in that Pleasanton show; we suspect they didn't understand our rural politics.

Then last year the county's unionized employes really discovered the Fair ... as a prime target for picketing that would draw the world's attention to their problems with the supervisors. Result — scratch one 1976 County Fair with losses in the hundreds of thousands of dollars.

That's one way of "bringing the County Fair into the big time."

Before they bring one of the finest expositions in the western states to its knees, we suggest the board of supervisors tred softly, and carry a very big carrot.

Classroom prayer

The setting this time is a federal appeals court in New Orleans, but the question is the same one that too often has divided cities and hamlets across this land.

There is always some one to raise the challenge for "prayer in the classroom." Just as often, there is a strident voice which maintains that any mention of God, or any other super power, is a violation of our constitutional guarantees "separting church and state." From that point, the arguments get wilder, and emotions get hotter.

There has been, in fact, very little room for quiet reason in all this talk of God - in - the - classroom. It might be fair to assume that most Americans no longer look to public schools as the source of any religious training, or even religious exposure, for their children. Given our divergent beliefs, it makes more sense to offer such instruction in the church, the Bible classes, or in the home.

But that does not say there is no room in public instruction for an understanding of Jesus Christ, and Moses, and Buddha, and all of the other great teachers who impacted peoples and nations beyond the force of wars, or the flight of centuries.

We will only achieve a rational approach to "knowledge of religion" in the classroom when we are prepared once and for all to remove "worship of religion" in every public school. Those of us who have a firm belief in the one, will find great accomplishment if Americans can ever agree on the other.

. . .and a choice

There are some who believe the public school "failure to emphasize moral values" is sufficient reason for seeking out private instruction for their children. That number is growing, according to a recent study by the California Department of Education.

The gains recorded by private schools, including those operated by religious groups, is even more significant when laid alongside the decline in California's public school registration.

In just the last two years, 2814 private schools in the state increased their enrollment by 12,135 students, to a total of 433,782. In that same period, public school totals declined by 39,171 to a low of 4,380,400.

Many factors contribute to the slow down in public school use, including a drop in migration into California, the state report notes. But it is also evident that some families make that switch because of "problems in public education these days" ... including integration, busing, and even our old friend, "the classroom prayer issue."

Locally, we have heard from parents who took their children out of public schools "because of the lack of discipline" while still others acknowledge "a problem child" could gain more personalized treatment in the smaller confines of a private school.

The state report shows church - affiliated schools making the strongest gains in the private sector. But it has not always been easy. In the last 12 months, 179 private schools were closed down, 235 new ones started up.

FOCUS/Fair board

Pushing 'old line'

County supervisors must still work out the question of length of terms and number of appointments as it concerns directors of the Alameda County Fair Association.

This and other crucial points related to personnel, land acquisition and capital improvements, and a cancellation clause remain to be finalized.

There seems little doubt the relationship of the county and the Fair Association is at an important juncture.

And the makeup of the board seems to be a prime point of agitation.

At present, the Fair Association can have a maximum of 21 board members with 16 elected (by the board) and five appointed (One each by the five supervisors).

The Fair Association has said it would be amenable to increasing board strength to 26 members and permitting supervisors to have two appointments each. Fair directors are also agreeable, for the record, to placing a 16-year limit to terms.

The aim of supervisors is to make the board more responsive and representative of the entire county.

As stated in these columns previously, this can only be done at the sacrifice of one or two Valley representatives — much in the manner of the county Board of Education. In the latter situation, the one-man, one-vote principle resulted in the Valley losing a representative to the board and the metropolitan Oakland area taking that position.

Without in any way taking away from the accomplishments and long service of the Valley board members, it seems not only right but practical that the Fair board makeup be more reflective of the entire county.

Whether increasing the board membership to an unwieldy 26, and having supervisors appoint two members each, is the proper procedure is highly debatable.

There appears to be more merit in placing a cap on the number of years a board member can serve. Sixteen years has been proposed.

But in noting this, it was stated that 16 years would be counted from this point in time.

Thus, directors who've served 10, 15 or more years already could look forward to another "lifetime."

A formula should be devised so that such directors, in the 10-to-20 years service bracket, would complete their term after another 6-or-8 years (maximum) tenure.

Directors with over 20 years would complete their service after another 3-or-4 years. And directors with under 10 years tenure on the board would retire after another 12 (maximum) years as a director.

Supervisor appointees would remain at one-per with maximum term of service 12 years or pleasure-of-the-respective-supervisor.

Lee Hall, secretary-manager of the Fair Association, has said that attrition will bring about openings on the board.

All of this discussion of board makeup by supervisors comes with a certain undercurrent of anti-WASP feeling — if the truth be known.

There is a certain level of unfounded paranoia, not only with the supervisors but with other urban-based panels around the country, that supposed "old line" boards are exclusive, self-serving and repressive.

Amazingly, some of this type of thinking comes from liberal minds seated on the top of the heap.

Supervisors have a difficult and delicate task ahead in acting on the proposed five-year contract with the Fair.

They should keep in mind who the Fair serves, who has built it and who should build it to even higher standards in the future, when determining the makeup of the Fair board.

—By AL FISCHER

Letters to the Times

Gun destruction

Editor, The Times:

Since G.H. Reedy (Times, Sept. 21) requested it, I will make one final attempt at explanation. A ban on handguns would result in a very large stockpile of weapons. Museums could not absorb them and the police would not have space to store them, so it is reasonable to assume they would be destroyed.

Webster defines vandalism as senseless or ignorant destruction of valuable property. There is no question about guns being valuable property, and the destruction of guns taken from innocent citizens not involved in crime is senseless, so it would qualify as an act of vandalism.

My "tortured" explanation of the cost is already about as briefly and clearly stated as any simple arithmetic problem can be, so I won't bother to repeat it.

G. Roger Gathers
Pleasanton

Home insulation

Editor, The Times:

Councilman Staley has explained the reasons for the Council's mandating home insulation before sale. The action was taken because of the new principle that energy is a scarce resource and no one has a right to waste it. I wonder why the Council doesn't concern itself with such really scarce resources as gold, platinum and diamonds. If its because they are protected by their price, perhaps the Council can do something about the wasteful use of natural gas, our fuel of greatest scarcity, due to government regulating the price at a level well below its value.

If the Council were really interested in saving energy why didn't they do something effective like: 1) require sealing of fire places, 2) prohibit heating of swimming pools, 3) require use of solar clothes dryers (i.e. clothes lines) or 4) require wearing of wool underwear and sweaters in winter so everyone would keep indoor temperatures lower? Instead the Council chose to require installation of home insulation prior to sale. Staley freely admitted this would have no effect until a house was sold. Thus, as a means of conserving energy, its very slow - but it explains why the Council felt they could get away with it. Each home owner will come up against the raw power of the City alone and defenseless. Any regulation requiring simultaneous action by all might unite the voters in concerted opposition.

This explains why the Council risked such action but not why they took the action in the first place. If not designed to conserve energy was it taken: 1) to please labor unions or building suppliers? 2) as an excuse to enlarge the City bureaucracy? 3) for the sheer exhilaration of wealding over? or 4) because we voters don't have the brains to look after our own welfare? You may not like this last possibility but there is evidence to support it. After all, we are the ones who voted this Council into office, aren't we?

Western Water ' .c.

Editor, The Times:

Your editorial of August 17 relative to the Governor's Commission to Review California Water Rights Law has just come to our attention. The work of this commission can potentially have far reaching impact on the people of California, and it is healthy for it to be receiving attention of the news media so that people will become more aware of the commission and its work.

Our publication, Western Water, is devoted to bringing issues and problems associated with the management of water resources before the people ... We are indeed honored that your editorial cited our recent article devoted to the work of the Governor's Commission.

However, I am concerned that you may have misled your readers into thinking that Western Water has taken a position that California's water rights laws are in need of revision. We, of course, were very careful not to take a position on that point, but were attempting to present full information so that people would be better equipped to arrive at their position. Your editorial quoted accurately the following setence from the Western Water article: "Some feel that water rights law is a hodgepodge that has not kept up with changing needs of the California economy and society." Your editorial ignored the very next sentence that says, "Others feel it is a working system that has been adapted to fit changing needs and tampering with it may have harmful results." Taken together, these sentences served to summarize the context in which the Governor's Commission will be doing its job. ...

round the town

As you are aware, they like to play games in Washington.

Sometimes the plaything is your money, sometimes it's just other countries. And then again, sometimes it's ... well, other people.

Right now the in - game in Washington is "Whatever happened to ...?" It is not new to the D.C. scene. It is a game always played in the second year of a new administration ... trying to track down the bright young bodies that were so terribly evident in the administration's first year, but that have a tendency to just fade away, after 12 months or so.

The difference this time is that they're playing "Whatever happened to ..." ?" in the FIRST year of Jimmy Carter's reign. Some of President Jim's faithful suggest it's all a ploy by the GOP to cast doubts on the Carter administration's durability. To suggest that they're - moving - out - faster - than - Jimmy - can move - em - in, sort of thing.

The rules of the game are not all that firm. You can play "Whatever happened to ...?" using names of those who have fled the D.C. scene for ever and ever (Bert Lance and Spiro Agnew would fall into that category) or you can add a clever touch by choosing a name once prominent in the nation's capital, but lately out of things, if you know what I mean.

This latter ruse has been used by presidents who like to ease an unwanted servant out of the White House by starting rumors as to that person's political visibility, as they say.

"Whatever happened to Earl Butz?" was a question we began to hear about the time the fun - loving secretary of agriculture was embarrassing President Ford with his off - color jokes. Sure enough, Secretary Butz really did disappear, shortly thereafter.

Sometimes the game is employed in the heat of a presidential campaign, one camp's sneaky way of suggesting the opposition doesn't really exist.

"Whatever happened to Senator McGovern?" This was one of Richard Nixon's dirtiest tricks, and might have made the headlines, . had not Watergate captured our attention about that same time.

The reasoning behind a particular game plan can be a mystery, even to Washington insiders. Take the latest "Whatever" which originated earlier this week on the wires of the Associated Press, and quickly spread to newspapers throughout this nation and much of the free world.

"Whatever happened to Walter F. Mondale?" That was the lead paragraph in the AP story. The reporter goes on to recall the Mondale - Carter "personal relationship" of the campaign era, and all that talk about "I want a vice president who will be visible at all times."

Turns out that no one has seen Vice President Mondale in weeks. A telephone call placed to the White House brought a surprised clerk's response ..." Walter Who?" (That's a different game than "Whatever happened to" however, and the White House clerk was so advised.)

"Mr. Mondale is very busy representing the president in a number of foreign assignments," is the official White House line. Trouble is, a check of 32 American embassies around the (free) world produced no record of the vice president having signed in there. (It did however produce 22 "Walter Who?"s which again, we refused to play at this time.)

"But how," you ask, "can Washington simply lose a man of Walter Mondale's stature? After all, he was a prominent member of the Senate, or the North Dakota legislature, or something, even before he was demoted to vice president." Good question. But again, that's not the game they're playing, this month, in Washington.

Ah yes, there were those other games of yesteryear, in our fun -loving capitol. Who will ever forget "I'm No Crook!" — with a presidential pardon for the winner. Then there was "Congressional Capers" and the low point player got dunked in the nearest reflecting pool, with appropriate companion of the opposite gender.

One of the newer games is "S.I. Hayakawa Slept Here" while a nation - wide audience will be invited to play "Would You Have Found Lee Harvey Oswald Guilty If Jack Ruby's Gun Had Misfired?" The jury is impaneled tonight and tomorrow, Channel 7.

Is there an end to these "games Washington likes to play"? Probably not, given the subject matter. But there are reports that rules are already being drawn for the ultimate D.C. quiz: "What Are The Odds Some White House Kookie Won't Push The Wrong Button?"

Winner gets to appear with Groucho Marx as guest expert on "You Bet Your Life!" Far out.

Mexic-aid

A program which could do much to eliminate the problem of illegal Mexican farm workers has been undertaken by Lt. Governor Mervyn Dymally. It's simplicity is only exceeded in attractiveness by the fact that it wouldn't cost the state or the federal government a dime. In fact, it could save the taxpayer's millions now being spent by the immigration service in its constant battle against "wetbacks."

Working on the theory that the Mexican Nationals would prefer to remain in their own country if they could obtain agricultural work there, Dymally has undertaken to help develop the markets in California for crops which can be grown south of the border.

Already he has met with officials from Mexico and the border states of Arizona, New Mexico and Texas to formulate plans to encourage the expansion of Mexican agriculture to meet the market needs of the four states.

As he points out, the climate in Mexico is ideally suited for raising winter crops which are in demand in the nearby states during seasons when domestic farms are dormant.

The major problem is devising the way to assure that the Mexican produce will receive fair treatment from produce merchants when it arrives at stateside market places. Fair treatment would mean reasonable profit for the Mexican farmers.

The marketing, of course, has always been a gamble for farmers, especially those engaged in growing perishable row crops because of the traditional operations of fresh produce merchants. The farmer who arrives with his truckload earliest gets the highest prices while later arrivals often are faced with the option of selling at near loss or getting nothing for their efforts.

Dymally's plan coincides with desires of the Mexican government to create labor markets for its people by expanding agricultural operations. Farming in that country received a crushing setback when an earlier government divided up the land into parcels too small for economically feasible production. Now the government is seeking to encourage cooperative large scale farming but needs assured markets.

Dymally sees cooperation with the Mexican government in helping it to establish stable marketplaces for its produce as an easy way to solve this state's problems with illegal agricultural workers. He says these number about 100,000 throughout the state.

"They come here only because there is no work for them in their own country. Obviously, if they could get work at home they would be foolish to come here." He said just crossing the border is often at the risk of their lives. "Once here many are forced to work at less than minimum wages and many, because they fear being arrested, pay kickbacks to those who broker the employment."

Dymally's program is enthusiastically endorsed by Senator Ruben Ayala, a leader of the Mexican American community. "It's a great idea," says Ayala. "The best thing about it is that nobody is asking for subsidies, grants or any other kind of financial aid. All they want us to do is help them establish a fair market so they can make their program work."

Dr. Joyce Brothers

DEAR DR. BROTHERS: My 17 - year - old daughter is pregnant and too far along to even consider abortion. She's very immature and her boyfriend refuses to marry her. We've discussed this problem so often, we're all sick from worry. She says she won't give up the baby under any circumstances. She says she's always wanted something that belongs just to her. She doesn't want to share it with anyone, even with the father. I'm taking her to see our priest hoping he can convince her. I can't take care of the baby and I know it will come to this after the novelty wears off. What can I do? — W.W.

DEAR W.W.: Try to talk with your priest beforehand and tell him all the problems.

I agree, this is a serious and potentially tragic matter. If you can reach your daughter at all, try to get her to act out of love for the child, rather than from her own selfish needs. Remind her that having this child will restrict her social life, that when she wants to date boys or relax during the days or the evenings, the needs of her infant will demand her attention. Her friends will soon realize the restrictions on her life and will probably stop extending invitiations.

She will have no chance to continue her education or even pursue hobbies or talents until the baby is 4 or 5. Even then, she will have to think of the child first.

Unfortunately, psychological studies suggest that among unwed mothers, it is the most unstable who keep their babies. Often, they are lonely and expect their infants to give them a love they're incapable of giving. Remind your daughter that babies need to receive love. Even a puppy is more capable of giving the love your daughter is looking for. It is the mother who gives. The child only receives — at least for the first few years.

DEAR DR. BROTHERS: I feel very sorry for my older brother, but I can't seem to help him in his problems with women. He's been taken by cold - hearted, ruhtless women more times than I can say and yet he never learns. I can't understand how men can be such innocents when it comes to love. They seem to have endless faith and trust when they think they're in love. Because of his gullibility, my brother's always hurt. What can I do for him? — H.M.

DEAR H.M.: I'm afraid there isn't much you can do, other than to encourage him to try to analyze why he's attracted to this particular kind of woman. If he's constantly rejected, and it's not anything that he's doing, then I suspect he's unconsciously drawn to women who are hostile to men. He would probably find professional therapy beneficial.

It is true that men are usually much more trusting than women in matters of the heart. A survey disclosed that almost 50 percent of the women questioned thought men would not remain faithful to their wives, while only 28 percent of the men expressed doubts about women's fidelity.

There are some people who simply can't love. They can accept, but they're unable to give, usually because of some deep emotional block. However, if your brother is consistently drawn to this kind of woman, then something's definitely wrong.

Dr. Lamb

DEAR DR. LAMB — I am ashamed to complain about what is routinely a painless, quick and easy process of drawing blood, but it isn't true in my case.

Twice a year for six years I have endured painful and always futile efforts of two supposedly trained technicians trying to get blood for thyroid and potassium tests. Finally, the doctor has to do it himself, using veins other than those inside my elbows. By that time I am a nervous wreck.

It never gets any better. Is there a solution for me?

DEAR READER — Veins that have been used frequently often scar or undergo so much thickening and inflammation that they are no longer useful. In the course of time the inflammation subsides and some of them open again, but some never do. When a vein undergoes these changes blood has to be drawn from some other location. In severe problems when drawing blood or inserting a needle to supply fluids or medicine is essential it may be necessary to do a "cut down," meaning cutting the skin and surgically exposing the vein to be used.

The pain of a needle puncture can be minimized or abolished by spraying the skin with one of the coolants that evaporate on the skin and deadens the sensation momentarily in that area. The veins can be made more prominent by using a blood pressure cuff around the upper arm rather than just a piece of rubber tubing. The pressure on the cuff can be adjusted high enough to impede flow through the veins, causing them to stand out but not high enough to block the arterial flow into the arm. Warm soaks over the skin also helps in some cases.

Despite all of these efforts if a vein is scarred or obstructed it is not likely that anyone will be successful using that vein.

DEAR DR. LAMB — Is there a home remedy you can take that will prevent the formation of kidney stones? I have heard that one teaspoon of honey with a tablespoon of vinegar daily would do this or a can of beer daily was recommended by a doctor. My husband has had surgery for kidney stones.

DEAR READER — The best home remedy in the world for kidney stones is to drink enough water. Because sweating and other factors affect how much water you need the rule is to drink enough liquids to form two liters (about two quarts) and even better, three quarts of urine a day.

The increased urine flow should be maintained evenly over the 24 hour period. That means drinking water around the clock and a reasonable amount before going to bed.

Specifically using vinegar or honey will not prevent a kidney stone. Depending upon the type of stone — what it is made of — the doctor may wish to give medicine to acidify the urine. Beer is worse than useless. It contains oxalate which is often a factor in the formation of some types of kidney stones.

Q. "WHAT IS A KILLER WHALE?"
JIM DIETRICH WILSON, NY
A. KILLER WHALES ARE THE LARGEST MEMBERS OF THE DOLPHIN FAMILY, SO-CALLED BECAUSE OF THEIR REPUTATION OF BEING ONE OF THE MOST SAVAGE PREDATORS IN THE SEA
© 1977 by NEA Inc. T.M. Reg. U.S. Pat. Off.
DICK ROGERS

The largest of all dolphins is the killer whale. These huge black-and-white creatures often measure 30 feet in length and weigh several tons.

Killer whales aren't fish. They are mammals and breathe air. Like their dolphin cousins, they breathe through a single blowhole high in the head.

One of the most intelligent of all animals, the killer whale has a fearsome reputation because it preys on such warm-blooded animals as porpoises, dolphins, and seals, and will readily attack the great whales as well.

Its mighty jaws are equipped with rows of cone-shaped teeth and its throat is large enough to swallow a seal whole.

Despite its savage reputation, the killer whale has never been known to attack a human.

In captivity it is a friendly animal, and because of its intelligence and learning ability, it is usually one of the star performers in oceanariums.

Opening lead — 4♦

By Oswald & James Jacoby

If West could see all the cards he would open a spade or heart against three notrump. Not being clairvoyant, he opened the four of diamonds.

South won with the king over East's 10 and led a club. West rose with the king and now saw that a second diamond lead would be a give up play, since South was marked with the ace and queen of that suit. He also saw a chance to shut that club suit out by leading a heart and he led the right one. He planked down the king of that suit.

This gave South an extra heart trick, but it cost him four club tricks and four for one is a pretty good trade.

South had to win with dummy's ace. Then he cleared the clubs.

West led a second diamond. South still had a chance for his contract. Maybe that queen of spades would be an entry to dummy. He led a low spade and played dummy's queen. East produced the king and South was held to seven tricks. Three hearts, three diamonds and one spade.

Church employes organize

NEW YORK (AP) — American churches are under spreading pressure to put in practice themselves what they've preached to others — the right of workers to organize for collective bargaining. The demand for union representation has come from church employes in some Protestant and Roman Catholic institutions. In essence, the church bodies involved have voiced willingness to accept it.

But it's creating strains, economically and philosophically.

It's also compelling "the church to face its relations to its own social doctrine," says the Rev. Patrick Farrell of Washington, D.C., the U. S. Roman Catholic bishops' representative for parochial schools.

Although the major, historic churches, both Protestant and Catholic, have long supported the right of workers to form unions to represent their interests, church workers are among the last labor groups still largely unorganized.

"In a sense, it's a new frontier," observes James A. Hamilton, an attorney and associate general secretary of the National Council of Churches, whose nonsupervisory employes are planning a vote on union representation.

"Churches have talked about labor rights throuh the years, and perhaps the irony of church employes remaining unorganized is simply that nobody has picked up the ball to organize them," adds Hamilton, a United Methodist.

In any case, the unionizing moves have arisen not only among workers for the interdenominational organization of Protestant and Eastern Orthodox denominations, but have spread increasingly among teachers in Catholic schools.

A U.S. Catholic bishops subcommittee on the matter on Sept. 15 affirmed that in keeping with long-time church teachings supporting labor rights, church employes are entitled to organize and bargain collectively.

But the statement also points out that church employes are part of a "community of faith, formed by Gospel values, whose purpose is service to others."

The church always has held up that idealistic commitment, rather than high pay, as a main motivation for its workers. For it, Catholic clergy and sisters take vows of poverty, and Protestant clergy similarly accept wage levels below what comparable education would command in other fields.

Churches also are in a nonprofit category, their limited resources for schools and other programs dependent on freewill offerings. Both circumstances — differing from the ordinary commercial-industrial world — make for church difficulties in adjusting to negotiations with unions of church workers.

"It's tough to apply the principle," says Catholic Bishop Joseph A. McNicholas of Springfield, Ill., cochairman of the bishops subcommittee and also head of the U.S. Catholic Conference social-development committee.

"But principle is principle, and we stand behind it."

Annual Golf Tournament

LIVERMORE — The St. Michael Annual Golf Tournament will be held at the Las Positas Golf Course on Sunday, Oct. 23, with starting tee times at 8:30 a.m.

Dinner will be served in the evening at the Parish Hall. Anyone interested in participating in the tournament as a player or on the prize or social committees may call Jean or Donna Bowles, 455-0153, or Linda Merritt, 443-7043. Reservations may also be made by calling these people.

Sunday School preparation

LIVERMORE — Trinity Baptist Church, 460 North Livermore Ave., begins it's church year with an intensive preparation time for their new Sunday school program under the direction of Mr. LaVern Plett, during Bible Study Advance.

Mr. Plett, Sunday school director of a church with over 3000 persons enrolled in classes, will speak each evening, Oct. 2-6, at 7 p.m. at Trinity Baptist Church.

"A Guide To Sunday School Enlargement" is the text for this seminar. It is available for $1 at the church, during normal office hours.

All interested Christians are invited. There is no charge other than the textbook.

New faces in Diocese

OAKLAND — The Catechetical Ministry Office of the Oakland Diocese has a new Associate Director, Sister Renee Shields SHN and a new field service consultant for Alameda County, Ms. Alice Soto, it was announced recently by the Rev. Paul Schmidt, director.

As field service consultant, Ms. Soto will be liaison between the Alameda County parishes and the Pius X Center of Catechetical Ministry. She will train catechists in the county.

Both Ms. Soto and Sister Rene will headquarter at the Pius X Catechetical Center, 521 Boden Way, Oakland.

Jewish Sukkot

LIVERMORE — Students of Congregation Beth Emek's relious school will participate in an East Bay open huse Sukkot celebration at the Jewish Community Center of Southern Alameda and Contra Costa Counties in Oakland on unday, Oct. 2.

A bus will transport the students from the synogogue, College and M streets, to Oakland. The bus will leave at 11 a.m. and will return at 4 p.m.

An installation ceremony for the new center director will take place in the Sukkah at 11:30 a.m. Each department of the center will give demonstrations, such as art, drama, crafts, singing, dancing, from 12:45 to 2:30 p.m. There will be field games and the senior citizens' group will sell traditional Jewish foods.

The Klezmorim music group from Berkeley will entertain throughout the day. Admission is free, and the Sukkot celebration is open to the public.

Religious school students and parents who bring their lunches will be able to eat in the sukkah constructed at the Jewish Community Center, a division of the Jewish Welfare Federation. Students and parents may also bring decorations to hang in the sukkah.

Sukkot or the Feast of Tabernacles began as an agricultural holiday, lasting seven days. During the seven days, Jewish families are to eat all their meals in their own sukkahs and, if possible, sleep in them.

Each family decorates its own sukkah.

During Sukkot there are specific religious obligations that must be met at home and in the synagogue by using the lulav (palm branch), esrog (sweet-smelling citrus), hadas (myrtle twigs), and arabeh (willow branches). At the center's sukkah in Oakland, these religious obligations will be performed.

Sukkot began Tuesday, September 27, and lasts through Monday, Oct. 3.

Scholarship Luncheon

PLEASANTON — The women of the Pleasanton Presbyterian Church invite the public to their annual scholarship luncheon on Oct. 4 at 11 a.m. in the Social Hall.

The guest speakers will be Priscilla and James Njorges from Kenya, Aftrica. The message will be "Mission in an Afrian Clergy."

Both of the young couple are students at the seminary at San Anselmo. James is studying to receive his doctorate in theology.

They have three children: Jean, eight, James, 20 months, and Jeremiah, ten months.

For reservations, call Sue Hillyer, 846-5361, by noon on Monday, Oct. 3. Tickets will also be available at the door.

'A Time of Harvest'

PLEASANTON — First Baptist Church of Pleasanton, 4100 First St., extends a cordial invitation to everyone in the community to attend a series of evangelistic meetings, entitled "A Time Of Harvest," beginning Thursday, Oct. 6 and running through Sunday Oct. 9.

Thursday through Saturday the services begin at 7:30 p.m. with a special preservice concert at 7 p.m. Friday evening will feature Sunday School night and Saturday will feature Youth night with fellowship following the service.

The Rev. Ancil Scull will be the featured evangelist. He is a former missionary to Indonesia and is presently serving as pastor of the Calvary Baptist Church of Lafayette, California.

Bill Schahn will be the music director and is widely known for his singing ability. He has studied widely in the music field and has served as an instructor for many music clinics. He has also served many years as music director in several churches, and is now serving in that position at First Baptist Church, San Mateo.

A nursery will be provided for all services.

Birthright Center

LIVERMORE — October marks National Right to Life Month and also marks the beginning of the second year of the Birthright Center at its present office at 1171 Murietta Boulevard.

In its sixth year of service to the Livermore-Pleasanton-Dublin community, Birthright last year handled over 200 distress calls for information or help in the areas of abortion, birth control, financial assistance, health care, housing and maternity and baby clothing.

The center answers an urgent need for confidentiality, understanding, compassion, moral support, factual advise, and, in some cases, simply a friendly listener.

The Birthright Office is staffed by volunteers on Monday, Wednesday, and Friday mornings and Thursday evenings. During off hours, an answering service provides home phone numbers of office members for those requiring information or help.

The Birthright Center is supported by donations from private individuals, churches and other groups in the community. Director of the Birthright Center is Louise Devoto.

Midweek Pre-school

DUBLIN — Midweek school for pre-school children is held on Tuesdays, 9:45 to 11 a.m. at St. Philip Lutheran Church, 8850 Davona Drive, Dublin. For information, call Marilyn Ogden, 829-3520.

Midweek school for grades K-6 and confirmation classes for grades 7 and 8, will be on Thursdays, 4 to 5:30 p.m. For information, call Gail Raleigh at 462-3598 or the church office at 828-2117.

Opportunities to participate in Adult Bible Study during the week may be had on Wednesdays at 7:30 p.m. or Thursdays at 10 a.m.

"Oh God, Remember" is the sermon topic this Sunday by the Rev. Koberg.

He smuggles Bibles through iron curtain

DUBLIN — Hans Kristian of Copenhagen, Denmark, founder and head of the Danish European Mission, is on a tour of the United States and will be appearing at Dublin High School Little Theatre on Sunday, Oct. 2, 6 p.m. The public is invited, and urged to come early for good seating.

The main emphasis of the Danish Mission for years has been behind the Iron Curtain providing Bibles and Christian literature, financial and other aid to persecuted churches and the families of those imprisoned and martyred for their faith in Christ.

Being intimately acquainted with conditions behind the Iron Curtain through his many trips there, Hans Kristian is particularly concerned to keep the Church in the West informed about what is happening today in Russia and the satellite countries. Many false impressions have been given, particularly that the days of persecution and suffering ended right after the death of Stalin, with steady improvement ever since. According to Kristian, nothing could be further from the truth.

Hans Kristian's most recent arrest in Eastern Europe occurred in Bucharest, where he was interrogated and held under guard overnight before being expelled from the country.

Anyone concerned for the believers suffering under atheistic totalitarianism is invited by Valley Christian Center to hear Hans Kristian's report of the latest developments in Eastern Europe.

The English edition of a book already in several other languages, "Mission Possible," that reads in places like a modern spy thriller, has been published by Fleming H. Revell Company of New Jersey. It relates Hans Kristian's life and the work of the mission.

John Knox Communion, Educational enrichment

DUBLIN — Together with Christians around the world, from all races and nations, the congregation of John Knox United Presbyterian Church will be celebrating "World Communion" during both the 8:30 and the 10:30 a.m. services of worship this Sunday, Oct. 2.

The pastor's communion meditation will be "Remember it!" And special music for the occasion will be sing by the church choirs.

It was forty years ago that World Communion was born after a group of ministers met to study the spiritual needs and possibilities of the church in the depression days.

Now, on the first Sunday of October more Christians will celebrate the Lord's Supper than any other Sunday of the year, praying for expressions of service to the "least of these, my brethren."

The Sacrament of Communion at John Knox Church is open to those who trust in Jesus Christ. All are welcome to come and break bread and share the cup of His love on this special observance. Children are also invited to participate with their family.

Church school classes for all ages of children and youth, as well as adult enrichment courses, take place during the 9:30 a.m. Christian Education Hour. John Knox Church uses the "Covenant Life" resource materials for its Bible-centered lessons with interest centers, team teaching in each classroom, and a trained and dedicated staff of twenty-two teachers.

Adult enrichment courses on Sunday include a Bible study of "The Prophets" and their message for us today, led by Chaplain James S. Griffes; a seminar on "Prayer Handles" led by Pete Prestegard, for prayer renewal in daily life; a study of "Death and Dying and Anticipatory Grief" from a Christian perspective, led by Kay Frank; and a "Community Concerns Forum" with speakers, films and discussion of current issues facing Christians today, which meets in the Fireside Room and is convened by various Elders of the church. These offerings are short term (6-9 weeks) courses and are open to all interested adults.

For more information on the youth fellowship activities for Jr. High, Sr. High and young adult, and for the Cherub Choir, Carol Choir and Chancel Choir rehearsals, persons may call the church office: 828-1846.

Ali holds off Shavers

NEW YORK — "They robbed me. They robbed me."

Those were the words of heavyweight challenger Earnie Shavers Thursday night after losing a unanimous 15-round decision to champion Muhammad Ali, a decision Shavers was sure he had won.

"I thought I was ahead on points," said the muscular Shavers, who chased Ali for 15 rounds but never caught him, according to the three ring officials, who gave the decision to Ali 9-6, 9-6 and 9-5-1.

"I won eight or nine rounds," said Shavers. "My corner told me I was winning."

If that was true, it was a tactical error on the part of Shavers' handlers. The judges' scores were being announced after each round on the telecast of the fight, and Shavers' team should have known the right score.

The hard-hitting Shavers, who never had gone past 10 rounds in his previous 60 fights, was proud of going the 15-round distance and staying on his feet the whole time.

"I was a little tired," said the 33-year-old Shavers, who had won 52 of his 54 victories by knockouts, the best knockout percentage in heavyweight history.

"But Ali was tired too. I did it (going 15 rounds). I was there. I never hit him real hard. I was trying to save myself," said Shavers.

Ali was showing every one of his 35 years at the end, but he also showed his tremendous courage when, after being sent across the ring by a smashing right in the final round, he came back with a flurry of head punches that almost put Shavers down.

It was a fantastic ending to a fight that had its dull moments and it again underlined the vast experience that Ali carries into any fight.

The fight was close through the first six rounds and then Ali, who hardly ever missed with his left jabs, especially when he chose to stick and move, took control in the seventh round.

Judges Eva Shain and Tony Castellano each had it nine rounds to six for Ali, while referee Johnny LoBianco saw it 9- 5-1 for the champion.

The Associated Press had it 10-5 for Ali.

The pattern of the fight was one of Shavers stalking and looking to throw the big right hand that had enabled him to knock out 52 of his first 60 opponents, while Ali looked for ways to nullify the challenger's power.

Ali was far more successful, often keeping Shavers too busy to punch by snapping home jabs, hooks and flurries of punches with both hands to the head.

It's just a guessing game

On Sports

Comparing high school football teams from different leagues or sections is virtually an impossible task, particuarly in such a large area as Northern California.

However, some people have tried to do it by way or prep polls or All-Northern California All-Star teams.

The only problem is, most of the selections are by subjective reasoning. In the case of the Northern California All-Star team selected by a group of writers who cover sports in the region, most of the writers have probably not seen teams from outside their section play in a single season.

Thus, when time comes the time comes around for the team to be selected, it becomes bascially a popularity contest.

And when it comes to selecting the best teams it doesn't get much easier.

Who, for example, could have picked a winner if North Coast Section 4-A champion Pinole Valley and Central Coast Section champion Saratoga played off last year.

The two teams didn't play any common opponent last year so there is really no way of speculating who would have won the contest.

One Far Western Conference coach felt Saratoga might have had a slight advantage because it had a quarterback who could pass and scramble if he had to. Saratoga was also slightly heavier in the defensive and offensive lines but Pinole Valley had a host of fine receivers so the game would have probably been a tight one.

But all this is not much more than guesswork.

One of the San Francisco newspapers runs a Bay Area prep poll each week. Since the start of the season Bellermine Prep of the West Catholic League and San Jose has been ranked first. In fact, the top four teams this week were from the Santa Clara Valley.

That seems a bit unrealistic. While most so-called prep football "experts" feel that the caliber of high school football is good in San Jose and its suburbs ranking four teams from the same county at the top of the poll is a bit far-fetched.

This is particuarly true since there are about 4.8 million people in the Bay Area and only 1.2 million live within the Santa Clara County boundaries.

This same poll has Granada and San Ramon of the East Bay Athletic League listed in the honorable mention rankings but Livermore is not mentioned at all.

That's hard to figure. The Cowboys were very impressive in dumping Lincoln of Stockton and Manteca. They are the defending EBAL co-champions along with Granada and have the biggest squad in the league.

The East Bay Prep Writers' Poll is also a mystery. Clayton Valley of the Diablo Valley Athletic League is rated in the honorable mention list but hasn't even played a game yet to the just-concluded coaches' strike. How one team which hasn't played a game yet can be rated with teams that have already played two or three contests is absurd.

The DVAL is regarded as one of the toughest leagues in the East Bay Area but no team, no matter how many returning lettermen or talent it has, can be considered if it hasn't been in action yet.

Some people feel that high school football in the Sac-Joaquin Section is the best in Northern California, with team like Cordova, Stagg of Stockton and Tracy annually fielding outstanding squads.

But again these opinions are purely subjective. Cordova and Stagg havn't played the top teams in the East Bay or the Santa Clara valley within recent seasons.

Picking a winner between Cordova and Saratoga or Pinole Valley would be almost impossible. The teams play generally play schools that are in their own section.

About the only way to determine who has the best team in Northern California would be to have a "North State" playoff system.

The winners of the various sections would compete at the end of the season after their own sectional playoffs.

The only problem with that idea is that the season would probably extend into January, thus disrupting the basketball, wrestling and soccer seasons in most leagues.

As it is now, the Central Coast playoffs extend until the week before Christmas. At least two more weeks would be needed to determine the Northern California championship.

Of course, there might be an easier way if the sectional champions would meet each other in preseason games. But with the rising costs of inflation and transporation hitting high schools now it would be hard to schedule some teams which are almost 200 miles apart (Saratoga-Cordova for example).

So it appears sportwriters and other high school football buffs will have to use polls as the only way to determine who is really the best.

And that's sheer guess work at best.

Memory Dale's only flaw

Times SPORTS
Dave Weber, Editor

NAPA — All year, Dale Douglass' golf game has failed him.

The 14-year Professional Golf Association tour veteran has failed to make the cut in most of the tournaments he's entered this year. When he has lasted past two rounds, he's failed to win a significant check.

Fortunately for the 41-year old Douglass, the only thing that failed him yesterday was his memory. Playing the shorter South Course at Silverado Country Club, Douglass fired a six-under par 66 to take a one stroke lead after 18 holes of the $200,000 Anheuser-Busch Golf Classic.

"This is certainly super for me," said Douglass, who hasn't won a PGA tournament for eons and whose best finish this season had been a tie for ninth in the Florida Citrus Open. "It's the first time in memory I've shot a good score; I hit well, I putted well, everything was decent."

Note the choice of words: decent. When you've been down for as long as Douglass has, words like "stupendous" or "great" are weighed carefully. Yet, Douglass, who ranks 54th on the career money list despite a 151st place standing this season, never considered taking a 9-to-5 job.

"All my friends come up to me and say, 'hey, Dale, there's a good club job over there,' " he laughed. "I've never considered it."

He added, "Everybody has thoughts of quitting. Everybody quits the tour or gets cut from the team sometime — that's not bad, that's just the way it is.

"I've never got to the point where I decided to quit trying, though," he explained. "That's when you decide to quit the tour."

After birdieing eight holes yesterday, including three par fives, Douglass shunted such thoughts into an even dustier corner.

Despite the fine round, however, Douglass is not safely ahead. A stroke back at 67 are Mac McClendon and Larry Ziegler, three players are grouped at 68 and and a dozen more shot 69.

Ziegler, who shot a 65 in a practice round on the south course last month, his voice to a chorus warning that the 6619-yard layout is full of potential pitfalls. Cluttered with trees, brooks and fairway bunkers, it is, says Ziegler, "a course where you can either shoot a low score or a high one."

The lows had it yesteday. Of the top 18 scorers, just one, home town boy Mark Lye, played the North Course, apparently the tougher of the two.

Lye was briefly the leader in the clubhouse, but watched Douglass, McClendon and Ziegler post lower scores as did the trio at 68, Pat Fitzsimons, Grier Jones and Gibby Gilbert.

Lye, who grew up around the Silverado course, may have written the first chapter to one of the sport's fairytales with his 69. Four times Lye caddied during the Kaiser International tournament at Silverado and twice he played as an amateur.

Now, in his first appearance as a pro, he has the low score on the tougher of the two courses.

"It feels great to be home," Lye, a PGA rookie who spent considerable time last year playing in the South Seas and Australia, said. "This was my first year on the tour and I played far too much, I haven't been home for six months."

The first thing Lye was faced with was one of the things he doesn't like about his golfing "home," the 439-yard, par-4, first hole of the North Course.

"I don't know what it is about the thing. I never could get started on it," Lye recalled. Yesterday was different. Lye reached with an eight iron and dropped his four-foot birdie putt to set the tone for what was to come.

It was also a noteworthy day for Bobby Walzel, though he was not among the leaders. Walzel aced the 180-yard 15th hole of the South Course with a four iron.

It was the first hole-in-one on the tour for Walzel, who now has six during his complete career.

Wolves again defeat Gaels

In a battle between two of last year's three East Bay Athletic League volleyball co-champions, San Ramon edged Dublin, 15-9, 13-15, 15-18.

San Ramon won the EBAL playoffs last year with Dublin and Monte Vista after the three teams finished regular-season play in a three-way deadlock, and last night the Wolves showed they are probably the top team to be reckoned with again.

"We played almost errorless ball," said happy San Ramon coach MaryAnn Paz. "Our serves were strong and our bumps were usually right to the setter."

Debbie Lloyd's serving keyed the Wolves' first-game victory. Lloyd served up five points, four of them consecutively.

Wendy Merrick, a last-minute substitute, stepped in to give San Ramon an almost insurmountable lead right off the bat, serving up six consecutive points to start the third game.

The Wolves' third-game effort was also aided by three fine stuff-blocks by front line player Kathleen Guthrie.

Carolyn Hill served five straight points to give Amador Valley a thrilling come-from-behind victory over previously undefeated Livermore on the losers' court.

Hill's points gave the Dons a 15-13 victory in the third game. Livermore won the first contest, 15-9 and Amador Valley came back to take the second one, 15-7.

Livermore had a 13-10 advantage before Hill used her serves. Paula Ng had spearheaded the 'Pokes' effort with some brillant spiking in all three games.

In the first game Donna DiGraza scored six points to give the 'Pokes the win.

AMADOR Valley came back with some brillant defensive plays in the second game. The vistors took a 5-0 lead before Livermore hit the scoreboard.

The Cowgirls tied the score before the Dons put on a 4-1 spurt to ice the contest. Both teams are now 2-1 in EBAL action.

In another EBAL contst, Granada swept past Foothill, 16-14, 15-2.

Foothill led the first game, 13-7, but was unable to stay on top.

Granada's Leann Stoddard served seven points in a row to key the Matadors' comeback. Kelly Gorgan served eight points for the Falcons.

Bettie Vierra served four points in each game for Granada.

'Pokes can't halt MV

Defending East Bay Athletic League champion Monte Vista faced its toughest opponent of the season and came away with a 6-1 victory over Livermore in tennis action yesterday.

Livermore, generally regarded as the team with the best chance of dethroning the Mustangs, made the match much closer than the final score indicates. The Cowboys took three of Monte Vista's singles players to the full three sets before finally losing.

"At one point, the match really looked problematical," said Monte Vista coach Floyd Baker. "Our only loss was the first match finished, and at the same time, Doug Stone, our number one, and a couple other players were having problems."

Stone, highly-ranked in Northern California junior tennis circles, had all he could handle from Livermore's Steve Williford. Williford defeated Stone 6-3 in the first set and took his opponent to a tiebreaker before losing the second set. After taking the tiebreaker, 5-2, Stone was able to win the deciding set, 7-5.

Livermore's only victory came in number four singles, when Stefan Leupertz defeated Rick Overstreet, 7-5, 6-0.

"It's obvious to me at this point that Livermore is our toughest league competition," said Baker. "I was really impressed with them."

Baker noted that Monte Vista played the match without the services of its number two player, Tripp Gordon, who did not receive his physical in time to be eligible for yesterday's match. He is expected to be eligible in time for the Mustangs' remaining matches, however.

In another EBAL match, Granada defeated Dublin, 6-1.

Dublin's only victory came when the number one doubles team of Joe Kallman and John Amador defeated Granada's Steve Dayton and Monte Jensen, 1-6, 6-2, 6-4.

Also picking up singles victories for Granada were Greg Corallo, Mike Knell, Lino Neri, and Ted Chun.

In another match yesterday, Amador Valley blanked Foothill, 7-0. Leading Amador was top seed Matt Anger, who easily defeated Blake Shoemaker in straight sets, 6-0, 6-0.

Also picking up singles victories for the Dons were Dean Copeman, David Reineking, Pekka Palin, and Darrin Plott.

Amador's Dave Reineking calculates hit in yesterday's Don win.

Another balanced EBAL opens tonight

It's all for real now — With the non-league season behind them the East Bay Athletic League football teams start league play tonight. Dublin (2-1 in non-league action) hosts Monte Vista (2-1), Granada (2-1) travels to Amador Valley (1-2) and Foothill (0-2-1) is at San Ramon (2-1). All games start at 8 p.m. Tomorrow at 1 p.m. California (2-1) hosts Livermore (2-1).

LIVERMORE-CALIFORNIA

This is perhaps the most interesting match-up of the league openers. The surprising Grizzlies stunned a lot of people in trouncing Benicia and beating a tough San Lorenzo squad before falling to Miramonte of the Foothill Athletic League.

Livermore, on the other hand, is exactly where most of the experts thought they would be at this time. The Cowboys' only loss came in the last minute against Castro Valley. Since then they have beaten Lincoln of Stockon and Manteca.

California coach Mike McGinnis thinks his team will have to stop 'Poke quarterback Naish Piazza if the Grizzlies are to have a chance of winning the game.

"He's (Piazza) the key to their option offense," offered McGinnis. "We have to stop him from both running and passing."

McGinnis also thinks his own team will have to execute better than it did against Miramonte if it hopes to achieve a victory.

"Last week we had a breakdown," he commented. "If we're going to have a chance this time we'll have to get our execution down pat. We'll have to be able to both pass and run."

The California passing game will be run by Tom Woodmansee. Woodmansee was brillant against Benicia and San Lorenzo, throwing four touchdown passes in the latter contest.

The California offensive line is also an important key to any chances the Grizzlies have.

Livermore has an awesome running attack besides Piazza. Pete Martinez is the leading ballcarrier but seven other backs can also pack the ball.

As usual, Livermore's biggest asset is its depth. The Cowboys have 50 players on their squad.

GRANADA-AMADOR VALLEY

Amador Valley is coming on while Granada is hurting with injuries.

The Dons topped a tough Beyer squad, 13-3 last weekend for their first win of the year. Quarterback Pat Inglesby threw for 114 yards and two touchdown passes to spark the attack.

Inglesby will have returning All-EBAL defensive back Rob Flores with him in the offensive backfield.

Amador Valley also has more depth than usual this season and has good size in the line.

Ernie Zumbach, one of the EBAL's top shot putters last year, spearheads the Don line. Other top Dons are defensive back Paul McCleary and linebacker Bryce Swartzwelder.

Granada will have several players out of the line-up for tonight's game. including ace place kicker Bob Jamieson. Jamieson also doubled as a running back.

However, the Mats have a potent running game with Steve D'Ambra and fullback Dave Ridgewell. D'Ambra ran wild last week against Liberty, scoring twice, once on a 66-yard run.

Steve Robison returns at quarterback and is one of the best passers in the league. He is also a standout defensive back.

Mike Nalty leads a rugged Granada defense. The 218-pounder has beem effective against everyone he's played against this season.

FOOTHILL-SAN RAMON

Foothill has played a tough non-league schedule so it's very hard to evaluate the Falcons at this time.

But one thing is for sure. They will be in tough against the Wolves.

Quarterback Guy Houston threw four touchdown passes last week as San Ramon dumped Alhambra, 59-6. Alhambra edged out Foothill, 19-13 the week before.

The Falcons have been bothered by injuries this year but still have a strong defense, their trademark last season.

Eri Moran, a 6-5, 240 pounder has been very impressive at defensive end for Foothill.

The Falcons expect to have several players returning from injuries this week. Running back Sandy Eddington is expected to return against San Ramon.

MONTE VISTA-DUBLIN

The outcome of this game could depend on how healthy Dublin tailback Jon Batchelor is.

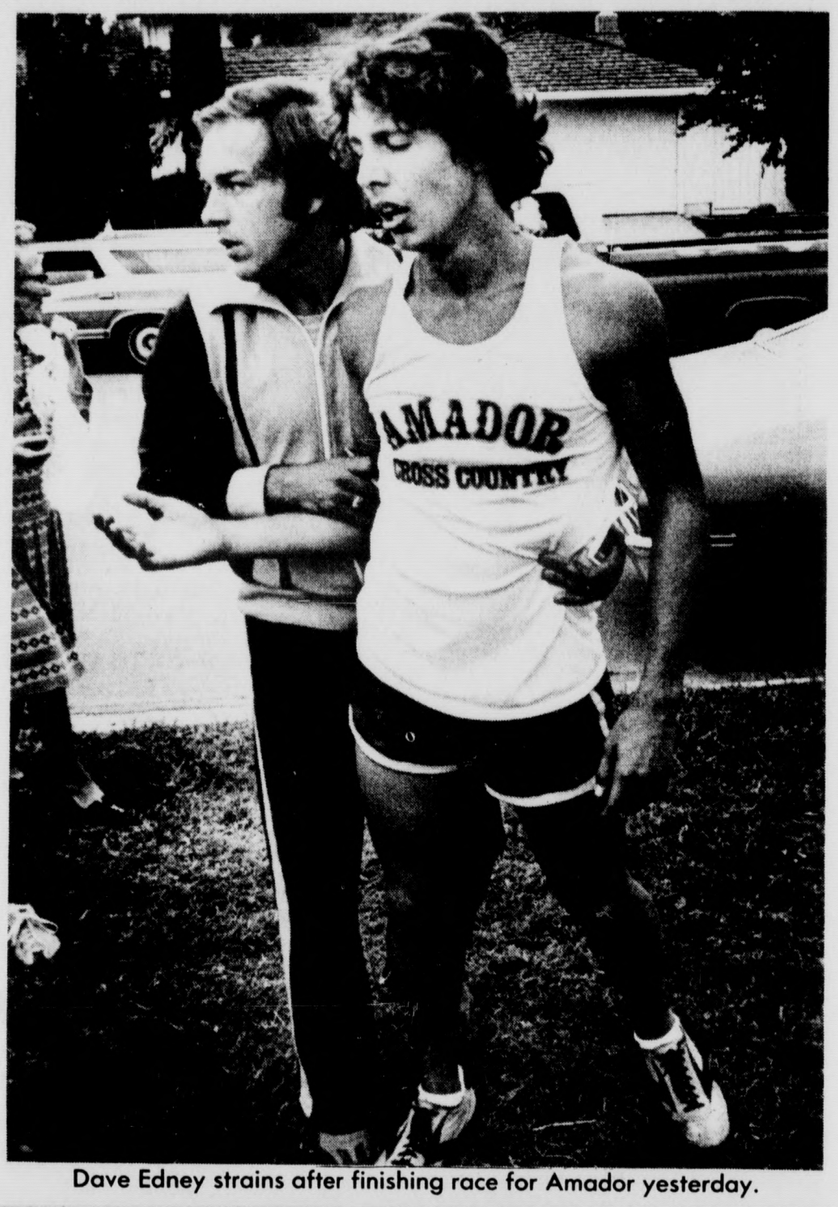
Batchelor missed last week's game with a sprained knee but should play this week.

Even if Batchelor is not at full strength the Gaels have a good replacement in junior Lynn Beamon. Beamon ran well against Acalanes and is also a good blocker.

Mike Hardy will again quarterback the Gaels and has done a consistent job.

Monte Vista also has a fine quarterback in Bart Adams. Adams rallied the Mustangs from a halftime deficit to almost upset Sunset in the season opener. Last week the Mustangs rolled over Menlo, 40-7.

Dane Seropian at defensive back, Jerome King at tackle, Marty Sparling at nose guard and defensive back Charlie Yamada are other Dublin standouts.



Dave Edney strains after finishing race for Amador yesterday.

49ers attempt to snap string in LA

Los Angeles Rams hope to take control of the National Football League's NFC West race Sunday with a victory over traditional rival San Francisco.

Kickoff in the LA Coliseum is 1 p.m.

The Rams, behind Joe Namath's play calling and passing and Larry McCutcheon's 100 - yard plus performance, downed Philadelphia 20-0 last Sunday to even their record at 1-1. It also snapped a five - game loss string.

Ken Meyer's 49ers, who are 0-2 in regular - season and 1-7 overall, scored their lone victory of 1977 against the Rams in a pre - season contest at Candlestick Park Aug. 21 by a 23-14 count.

San Francisco lost to Pittsburgh, 27-0, and to Miami, 19-15, in league competition.

LA Coach Chuck Knox turned over the play calling to Namath last Sunday after sending in offensive strategy from the bench in the Rams' 17-6 setback to Atlanta in the NFL opener.

The Ram defense looked much better against Philly as it came up with three interceptions and a fumble recovery in the shutout.

Los Angeles gave up only 112 total yards, allowing the Eagles to drive into Ram territory but once, that to the 48-yard line.

San Francisco's Gold Rush foursome of Tommy Hart, Jimmy Webb, Cleveland Elam and Cedrick Hardman is regarded as one of the best in the business.

In a 16-0 shutout of the Rams at the Coliseum last October, the front four had 10 quarterback sacks.

The troubled SF offense snapped out of it last week in the Miami game with Delvin Williams rushing for 82 yards and quarterback Jim Plunkett completing 11 of 20 passes for 123 yards. Three other Plunkett aerials should have resulted in easy catches, but were dropped by receivers.

The Niners are hoping their defense can come with the kind of performance it turned in during the Aug. 21 exhibition. That game saw the 34 - year - old Namath sacked five times.

The Rams lead the series, 33-19-2.

Falcon frosh win

Foothill High School scored twice on sweeps to defeat San Ramon 16-8 in a freshman football game last night.

The Falcons' picked up their first score when Rob Singleton swept right end for an 18-yard touchdown run. Mike Kovac kicked the extra point to give Foothill a 7-0 lead.

Bob Jones galloped 30 yards on a sweep for Foothill's second score. Kovac's conversion attempt was good again.

Middle linebacker Mark Dwyer closed out the Falcons' scoring when he sacked San Ramon's quarterback in the end zone for a safety. The safety capped an outstanding performance by Dwyer, who had 18 unassisted tackles.

Don harriers squeak

Amador Valley passed its first big test of the East Bay Athletic League cross country season, as it defeated Livermore by a single point, 28-29.

The Cowboys were one of the EBAL's pre-season favorites, but yesterday's lose was the Pokes' second of the season.

Livermore captured the two top places, as Rob Wentworth took first in 14:58, followed by Steve Llloyd in 15:37. Amador's superior depth was the difference, though.

Leading the Dons were Greg Novacek, who finished third in 15:38, Curtis Smith, who took fourth in 15:43, and Mark Lester, in seventh place with a 16:10 clocking. Also adding valuable points to Amador's cause were Mario DeSilva and Lloyd Champman.

It looks as though Amador is heading for a showdown with Granada, as the Matadors also won yesterday. Dublin fell to the Mats, 19-38. Granada is also undefeated. Granada swept the top three places. Jim Hunter crossed the finish line first in 16:21, followed by teammates Jeff Winkler and Chuck Whelan. Dublin's Robin Moss was the Gaels' top finisher, clocking a 16:52.

Ramirez falls to Fleming in TransAmerica qualifying

SAN FRANCISCO — Third-seeded Raul Ramirez of Mexico fell victim to the powerful serve of New Jersey's Peter Fleming, 7-6 (8-6), 3-6, 6-2 in one of the biggest upsets as yet in the TransAmerica Open Tennis Tournament here last evening.

Fleming, radiating confidence, explained that in his opinion that the victory was not a result of his serve.

"Everyone has a good serve. That's not the case. My strength is my return on these hard courts," he said.

According to Fleming, his winning strategy was to hit the ball as hard as he possibly could, and to aim in the general vicinity of the luckless Ramirez' backhand, which Fleming considers weak.

"But I should say that it's improved some. When I played him two years ago, he couldn;t break an egg with it," Fleming noted.

Nevertheless, Fleming didn't exactly overwhlem Ramirez other than with his serve. As he admitted himself, the match was closer than he cared to have it be.

"He conceivably could have won," Fleming conceded, "I just kept trying to hit for that last ball. He managed to hit it a lot of times when I couldn;t get to it. Like one foot to my right or left."

Ramirez sadly learned that Fleming's hard-hit plan was eventually effective, and he acknowledged it readily. "He hits very hard. He takes a lot of chances, too," the more-conservative Ramirez said. "His first and second serve are the same force. If he makes it, he wins. If he misses, well, he didn't," he reflected.

Ramirez explained that he played the more steady, consistent game, and predicted that if Fleming continued to play with the same style everyday, he couldn't maintain his win record.

"I kept expecting a double-fault. I don't think it's possible for him to go on much longer and not start getting them. I know he can't. It's surprising to me he gets away with it now," Ramirez said challengingly.

Ramirez explained calmly that there wasno point in the match where he felt relieved. "It didn't make me feel good if he missed the first serve, because the second one was just as hard," he said. "I wasn't playing adly at all. It's just that I couldn't control the match like I usually do. I didn't give him any chances to make mistakes. If he does make them in the future, I'm going to beat him because I'm always there," Ramirez asserted."

Fleming, after surviving the third-round eliminations, will face Harold Solomon in the quarterfinals tonight.

Yesterday did not bode well for another known name player.

Sixth-seeded Stan Smith was knocked out by San Clemente's Bob Lutz in the third round elimination, with the decisive score of 6-2, 6-2.

With little time to compose himself, Smith found himself on the same side of the court with Lutz two hours later in second round doubles elimination.

In the third major upset yesterday, John McEnroe from Stanford, eleventh seeded, defeated Spain's number two-seeded Manual Orantes, 6-4, 6-4.

Masters co-founder a suicide victim

AUGUSTA, Ga. — Clifford Roberts, co-founder of the Masters Golf Tournament, was found dead today at the Augusta National Golf Club, the victim of a self-inflicted gunshot wound, club officials said.

"It is with regret that the Augusta National Golf Club announces that its chairman, Clifford Roberts, died during the night," a statement from the club said.

"Death was caused by a self-inflicted wound," the statement continued. "Mr. Roberts had been in ill health for several months."

Roberts is survived by his widow, Mrs.Betty Roberts of Los Angeles, where the couple lived.

Roberts, 84, joined the late Bobby Jones in 1931 to raise money to build the Augusta National course.

The two initiated what was first called the Augusta National Tournament with the concept of inviting a field composed of Jones' friends who were qualified to play in the competition.

Jones, of Atlanta, was the nation's only Grand Slam golf champion.

The first Masters was played in 1934 and was won by Horton Smith. The event was held annually except during the war years of 1943-45.

Roberts, who was an iron-fisted ruler of the prestigious event, held the job of tournament chairman until the end of the 1976 Masters, when he relinquished the post to William H. Lane, a Houston businessman.

Roberts ruled it even after naming Lane to the position at the start of the 1976 Masters, when he introduced Lane at a news conference but refused to let him speak.

Roberts let it be known that he still was director of that tournament and Lane could speak for himself once that event had ended.

Gaels host Pioneers in key small-college contest

MORAGA — St. Mary's College's Gaels host the Cal-State Hayward Pioneers at 1:30 tomorrow nere in a non-league football contest.

The Gaels, in Division lll, are 1-1 after defeating Claremont last week, 16-6. Cal-State Hayward, a Division ll member of the Far Western Conference, is 2-0 after victories over Cal-State Northridge (13-3) and Cal-State Los Angeles (38-7).

"We're stepping way out of of league for this one," said St. Mary's mentor Dick Mannini. "Hayward has good team speed and size — they're a real good Division ll football team."

Tomorrow's contest will be the second between the two schools, the Pioneers holding a 1-0 series edge after handling the Gaels 30-3 in 76.

Although Hayward will hold decided advantages in size and speed over the upstart Gaels, an area that might not be affected is the kicking department. Pioneer punter Doug Saucedo has averaged 42.5 yards on 15 kicks with a 56-yarder to his credit. St. Mary's booter Kevin Shea has a 47.3 punting average after eight punts, including a 61-yarder. The former St. Ignatius of San Francisco star also handles the Gaels' place kicking chores and connected on a 22-yarder against Claremont.

"Kevin was probably our outstanding offensive player last week," noted Mannini. "He really kept Claremont bottled up all day." Shea had four punts for 199 yards with a 54-yard bomb and a 46-yard "coffin chip" that bounced out of play on Claremont's four-yard line.

Sophomore Gael quarterback Terry Cottle completed 14 od 24 passes for 140 yards, threw for one touchdown and ran for another. The ex-Davis High School standout made his first start of 1977 after piloting the team in eight contests last season.

"Cottle did a good job," Mannini observed. "We showed a little more consistency in our passing attack but we've still hot a lot to improve on."

Once again the St. Mary's offense relied heavily on running back Rich Orlando and receiver Rich Cellini. Orlando carried 23 times for 57 yards and Cellini hauled in four passes for 64 yards. Fullback Joe Pastor caught four aerials also and Orlando had two catches.

Linebacker Mike Boschetto (5-11, 195 pounds) and defensive tackle Jim Tardieu (6-2, 200 pounds) were sparkplugs for the Gaels in the victory over Claremont. Tardieu, a transfer from San Jose State in his senior year, recorded a pair of quarterback sacks.

However, Cal-State Hayward has a rugged defense of its own. The Pioneers led the Far Western Conference in defense last season. This year they are even better as shown by their impressive win over Northridge, one of the best college-division teams in the state.

Butler takes the lead

England's Peter Butler drives from the 18th hole Thursday during the second round of the $70,000 British Master Golf Tournament in Worksop, England. Butler, 45, birdied three holes in a row before gale-force winds reached their full strength, and with a two-under par 69, assumed a solid three-stroke command.

Meet WV

Chabot gridders seek the run

SANTA CLARA — Chabot College's football team hopes to have an improved running attack when it tangles with West Valley College in a Golden Gate Conference contest at Buck Shaw Stadium at 7:30 tonight here.

The winless Gladiators were held to one yard rushing in a 17-0 defeat at the hands of vastly-improved DeAnza last weekend in Hayward.

Chabot quarterback Ron Jones and second-stringer Tom McGinty were each dumped for losses against the Dons' stubborn defense. Eric Lane was the leading Gladiator rusher with 36 yards in eight carries. But no one else was able to run with any consistency.

A balanced attack is a must against the Vikings, who have one of the better defenses in the GGC. West Valley lost to a powerful Venta squad, 45-12 last weekend, but defeated Butte College of Oroville, 14-3 the previous weekend. The Vikings held Butte to just 151 yards total offense in that contest.

West Valley is usually one of the also-rans in the GGC but appears to have one of its better teams this year. They have an excellent place kicker and a balanced offense.

However, the Gladiators are better than they've shown this season.

Chabot has a potent passing attack. Jones complted 12 of 20 passes for 134 yards before leaving the DeAnza game with an arm injury. If he's healthy he could cause plenty of problems for the West Valley defensive backs.

Jones is the key to the Chabot offensive attack, usually one of the most advanced and fast-striking in junior college football.

The Gladiators are 0-1 in GGC action and the Vikings havn't played a conference game yet. A victory if a must if Chabot is to have a reasonable shot at the conference championship.

San Jose, Foothill, San Mateo and Diablo Valley all have potent offenses this season and any one of them could nab the GGC crown. Laney and City College of San Francisco also can't be ruled out.

NOTES — Laney could be the big suprise of the conference. The Eagles' 27-6 victory over CCSF last weekend was one of their biggest victories in recent seasons. CCSF was supposed to have their best team since O.J. Simpson was packing the ball for the Rams. San Mateo have the league's most potent offense at this time, having scored 58 points in the last two games. The Bulldogs gained 666 yards total offense in a 31-19 win over Santa Rosa two weeks ago. 606 of those yards came on the ground.

Watson, Butcher win CCC title

Bob Watson III and Don Butcher went from 1976 net champions to 1977 Gross champions in the Castlewood Country Club's Annual Director's Cup Better Ball Championship while Jay Yarbrough and Walt Peppin captured the net title.

Watson and Butcher recorded 70 on the Valley Course and 67 on The Hill for a 137 total to outdistance former champions Bill and Rain McNally, who had 74 and 65 for a 139. The winner played individually brilliant on Sunday as Watson fired 69 and Butcher 71.

Yarbrough and Peppin came from one shot off the pace Sunday on the strength of two rounds of Better Ball 63 for 126 to barely nose Charles Welnitz and Bill Terminello, who recorded rounds of 62 and 65 for 127.

Wellnitz and Terminello thus won the "A" flight while Elmer Mielbrecht and Bud Wicks recorded 68 and 61 to win the "B" flight.

The round of the tournament was fired by Jim McDonald and Paul Crawford, who recorded a net 58 during the seocnd round played on the Hill Golf course. The feature of that twelve under par round was McDonald's 78, his lifetime low.

Tom Leonard's eagle two on the Valley Course's eighth hole was the shot of the tournament.

Foursome win Mixer

Clyde Kutchera, Frank Thornburg, Andy McClanahan and Nel Wells combined for 146 points to easily capture Castlewood's recent Mystery Mixer.

Finishing second with 142 points was the team of Paul Walters, Elmer Mielbrecht, Ida Burk and Elinor Porter. Vic King's shot of 3-feet 3½ inches won his team the closest to the hole award at the 133-yard sixth hole. Sharing the team awards with King was Mort Hughes, Betty Abney and Jo Klarich.

The highlight of the winners' team was Thornburg's best round of his life at 82 strokes on the Hill Course.

Falcons win first

Foothill High School's girls swimming team won its first-ever East Bay Athletic League meet with a tight 76-75 victory over visiting Livermore Wednesday afternoon.

The Falcons got off winging in the first event. winning the 200-yard medley relay in 2:10.2. Foothill won the next two events to gain a sozeable lead on the Cowgirls and held on for the victory.

T. Moran led the winners' attack with a first in the 100-yard breaststroke (1:21.0) and a second in the 200-yard individual medley. Moran also swam the opening leg on the medley relay. Foothill won that race by 1.8 seconds over Livermore.

Livermore and the Falcons are each 1-1 in EBAL competition. San Ramon leads with a 2-0 mark and Granada is second with a 1-0 record. Monte Vista is 1-1, Amador Valley 0-1 and California 0-2 in league action.

Warriors face Lakers, Reno

RENO, Nev. — The Golden State Warriors are back.

Just four months after blowing an 18-point lead in the seventh game and an early National Basketball Association play-off round to the Los Angeles Lakers, the Warriors are back to host the Lakers tomorrow night.

Well, that is most of the Warriors are back. And, the game will be played in Reno's Centennial Arena. The latter may be a minor detail, but the first of urgent significance to the Warriors, who will be an essentially new team this season.

Jamaal Wilkes has fled to the Lakers and Gus Williams is trying to find a team, any team, that will pay him more than Golden State. That's 40 per cent of last season's starting lineup. Both front-line forward reserves, Derrek Dickey and Dwight Davis are injured again.

A pessimist would start using words like "disaster." An optimist looks backward to the 1974-75 season when the Warriors, having parted with, for various reasons, Nate Thurmond, Clyde Lee, Jim Barnett, Cazzie Russell and Joe Ellis, won the NBA title.

Golden State head coach Al Attles tries to find the bright side.

"If you had the same 12 coming back from the previous season, you wouldn't have to teach as much but, on the other hand, complacency might set in," Attles said on the eve of his seventh full season as the Warriors' floorside leader.

"With a lot of new guys comin' in, spots open up and a lot of quote old vets unquote have to scramble to make the team."

Dickey, who's sprained foot will keep him out until past the Warriors' league opener in Phoenix agrees.

"Most players games are 50-90 per cent self confidence and confidence is built in these training camps," Dickey said. "That should help bring a couple of the younger players along."

Davis, in a cast most of the summer, hasn't been able to play during the Warriors' two-week training camp at San Jose City College, but did run during the off-season and lifted weights.

"Nobody but God Almighty knows when I'll be able to play," said a dissappointed Davis, who twice was felled by injuries last season after staying healthy for years at the University of Houston and with the Cleveland Cavaliers.

The one-time Cavalier player representative is apprehensive about returning to the court.

"I'm trying to learn and study the plays, but not being on the floor makes it a little harder," he explained. "There are a lot of good, young ballplayers here, consequently a lot of guys may be getting other jobs."

As for the loss of Wilkes and the eventual lack of compensation from the Lakers and Commissioner Larry O'Brien, there is no overt concern.

"Without Jamaal, we still have a good situation if Derrek and Sarge (Davis) improve and Wesley Cox comes along," said center Cliff Ray. "We have ample players."

Dickey added, "We weren't a team based around one player and consequently our offense won't change because one player left. Take a team like Los Angeles and Kareem (Abdul-Jabbar), that's a different story."

Tomorrow at 8 p.m., the Warriors have a date with a team with Kareem and Jamaal and their faceless friends. They'll be trying new situations and working on various facets of the game, says guard Phil Smith, but:

"Beating a team like the Lakers, even if it is an exhibition, always gives you a lift."

Attles said yesterday he doesn't plan another cut John Hummer, Ron Daniel and Carl Bird have already been excused — until after the game tomorrow night.

For the record, that leaves guards Ricky Green, Rickey Marsh, Charles Johnson, Smith, Marshall Rogers and Charles Dudley, swingman Marlon Redmond, forwards Rick Barry, Larry Pounds, Sonny Parker, Ray Epps, Wesley Cox, Davis and Dickey as well as centers Ray, Robert Parish and Neil Jurgenson in Golden State's employ.

NBA clubs will carry 11 players on their active roster this year with two on a reserve list.

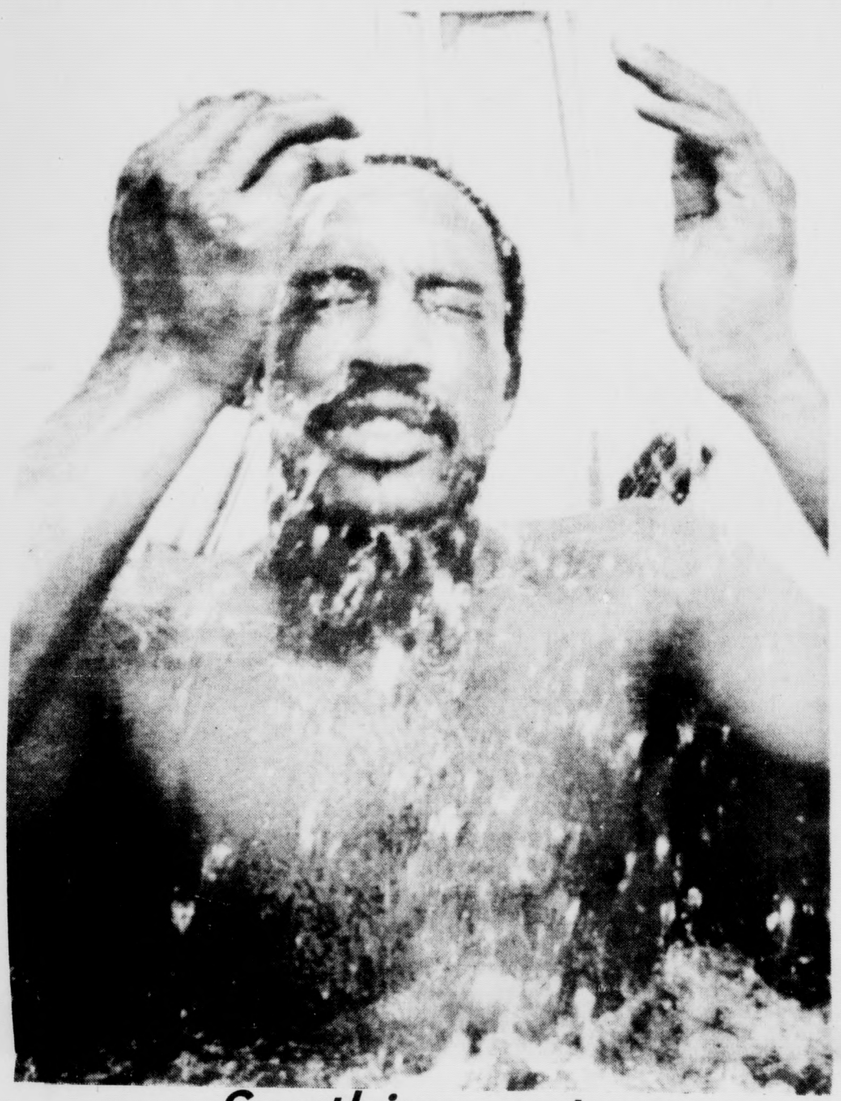
Signs long-term contract

Sportscaster Dick Enberg, right, signs a new long-term contract with NBC sports as Al Rush, executive vice president of NBC sports, looks on Wednesday in New York. Enberg will cover basketball, football, college basketball, and boxing, and will handle special assignments for NBC Sports.



Soothing waters

George McGinnis, Philadelphia 76ers forward, splashes water on himself as he sits in whirlpool bath during treatment for a nagging groin injury that contributed to poor playoff performance last spring. Since last season McGinnis has lost weight and strengthened his legs. "Right now I feel I could play an entire game," says McGinnis.

DMV warns seniors on cautious driving

SACRAMENTO — The state Department of Motor Vehicles (DMV) reminds all older automobile drivers with declining physical capabilities to compensate for those problems when behind the wheel.

If it seems other drivers are going too fast or near-accidents occur more often than they used to, DMV officials stated it may be time for a refresher course on road rules.

Many adult schools and local traffic safety councils offer such refresher courses.

The senior motorist gradually surrenders to time,his eyesight, hearing, physical dexterity and reflexes. These losses can make driving hazardous.

The DMV encourages senior drivers to continue driving as long as he or she can do so safely. Sometimes just brushing up on weak driving habits can add extra years of safe, independent driving.

If the older driver decides to stop drivingfor health or safety reasons, he or she can get a Senior Citizen Identification Card.

DMV's Backseat Driver Public Panel has published a pamphlet on the older driver containing many helpful driving hints.

To obtain a copy, write to the Department of Motor Vehicles, Backseat Driver Public Panel, P.O. Box 2411, Sacramento, Ca., 95811.

Amador lists citizenship class openings

The Amador Adult Education course in American government, to help the foreign-born to obtain citizenship papers, still is open.

The class meets Wednesday nights from 7 to 9:30 p.m. in Room B-2 at Amador Valley High School. Robert Lyons is the instructor.

In addition to necessary instruction on American government, the class also provides information, application forms, a book and fingerprint forms for persons seeking to become American citizens.

For more information on Amador Adult Education classes, call 462-0022 between 9 a.m. and 4:40 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Jerry Butterfield, formerly of Livermore, will sing Bluegrass songs and play the mandolin at 1:45 p.m. on Saturday, Oct. 1 at the Carnegie Park outdoor stage at 3rd. and K streets in Livermore. Accompanying Jerry will be Gary Beech playing guitar and banjo.

Jerry's interest in music goes back to his childhood in Livermore, when he took guitar lessons from local geologist Dean Cornett.

Major low tar brands tested!

Real voted* best low tar cigarette! Best taste. Most satisfaction. Richest flavor.

Now you know.

The Natural Cigarette.

All major brands enhance their flavor artificially. Only Real gives you all natural taste because Real uses only the finest tobacco blend to which nothing artificial has been added. Nothing.

You get great satisfying taste. And all of it is natural. All of it.

Now enjoy the cigarette that says it tastes best—and proves it. Low tar Real, the natural cigarette. Only 9 mg. tar.

The National Test.

Regular king-size filter smokers—both full-flavor and low tar smokers—tested Real Filter and major non-menthol low tar brands. Each person smoked one low tar brand on an unidentified basis and rated it. Real Filter was rated higher overall than every low tar brand tested. It was rated higher on taste, satisfaction, natural taste and rich flavor. Yet Real has only 9 mg. tar.

The natural cigarette. Nothing artificial added.

Warning: The Surgeon General Has Determined That Cigarette Smoking Is Dangerous to Your Health.

9 mg. "tar", 0.8 mg. nicotine av. per cigarette by FTC method.

Computer service tool diagnosies engine woes

Chrysler Corporation dealers have begun to order a revolutionary computer service tool for their service departments. The computer not only diagnoses engine malfunctions but also recommends corrective actions, a breakthrough in automotive diagnostic machinery.

Previous diagnostic systems have simply pinpointed problem areas, according to Francis G. Hazelroth, general manager of Chrysler's Service and Parts Division.

"Our new computer eliminates guesswork. It prescribes as well as diagnoses," said Hazelroth. "It's also fast, having the capacity to accurately assess as many as 60 different engine functions in less than four minutes."

The computer, developed and manufactured by Chrysler's Huntsville Electronics Division, is called the Electronic Engine Performance Analyzer (EEPA).

The new analyzer has a microprocessor computer with a memory bank programmed to test the engine's primary and secondary ignition, starting, charging, compression, and timing. EEPA will test any Chrysler passenger car or truck built since 1972, according to Hazelroth.

"We've also built in data-bank capacity to analyze future Chrysler vehicles as well as competitive vehicles," he said.

EEPA use requires minimal training for any dealer mechanic or service technician. The operator uses a ten-button console to indicate the numbpr of engine cylinders on the vehicle to be tested, the size of the starter motor, alternator, and the type of battery. Then he begins the tests.

An alphanumeric electronic display on the console guides the technician step-by-step through each test.

President's consultants urge disposal plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — The President's Council on Environmental Quality said Thursday that the nation should prove it can dispose of radioactive wastes safely, or stop building nuclear power plants.

The council recommended that the government set a deadline to demonstrate that it can get rid of nuclear wastes without endangering the public health. It also called for adoption of a national policy to change the base of the economy from nuclear and fossil fuels to solar energy.

The recommendations were unveiled by council member Gus Speth, in a speech prepared for delivery at a conference of the American Law Institute and the American Bar Association.

Speth said in an interview that he was speaking for the three-member council, whose function is to advise the President on environmental issues.

He said the recommendations have been circulated within the Carter administration but the council has not yet tried to bring them to the President's personal attention.

Speth, a former citizen environmental activist, said in his speech that the nuclear industry is in trouble. Power plant orders have come to a near-standstill in the past two years, partly because of serious, unsolved problems, he said.

Speth said one of the most serious problems is the unresolved question of what to do with radioactive waste from reactors and fuel processing plants, which must be isolated for as long as a half million years.

"We thus favor a national decision which would make the expanded use of nuclear power contingent on a clear and convincing showing ... that nuclear power's deadly by-products can be safely contained for geologic periods," he said.

Speth said the council proposed setting two deadlines: first, to devise a way to dispose of nuclear wastes safely, then to try the method and demonstrate that it works.

If either deadline is missed, "no new nuclear power licenses would be issued," he said. That would effectively mean banning the start of construction on new nuclear power plants until the waste disposal problem is solved.

But Speth also said the council is not happy with coal as a major power plant fuel, because of its significant pollution problems.

Speth said that in the long run, the nation should turn away from both nuclear and coal energy and rely more heavily on energy from the sun.

COUNTY OF ALAMEDA
STATE OF CALIFORNIA
NOTICE OF PUBLIC HEARING

The Planning Commission of the City of Pleasanton has set October 12, 1977, at the hour of 8:00 P.M. Wednesday evening, a regular Planning Commission meeting in the Pleasanton Council Chambers, 30 West Angela Street, Pleasanton, California, as the time and place to consider the following matter:

Application of the Planning Commission to amend Chapter 2, Title II of the Ordinance Code of the City of Pleasanton by adding Article 33, Scenic Highways Overlay District, to implement Resolution No. 77-30, "A Resolution of the City Council adopting a Scenic Corridor Protection Program" and to provide for standards and controls for all development within 1,000 (one thousand) feet of the right-of-way lines of Interstate Freeways I-580 and I-680. The proposed standards and controls would relate to design, screening, height, bulk, siting, placement of signs, development review procedures, and other considerations intended to protect the scenic qualities of the corridor.

On the basis of an Initial Study of the potential environmental impacts of the project, it has been determined that the proposed project would not have any potential significant adverse effects on the environment and that an environmental impact report need not be prepared. The Initial Study and Negative Declaration are available for review at the Planning Department, 200 Bernal Avenue, Pleasanton, California. Comments on this decision must be received at the Planning Department no later than October 5, 1977, in order to be considered by the Planning Commission prior to their decision on the proposed project.

The Planning Commission may approve, modify or deny the application, or recommend to the City Council any action deemed in the public interest.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that the hearing shall be held and persons concerned shall be heard by the Planning Commission.

NOTICE OF PUBLIC HEARING

The Planning Commission of the City of Pleasanton has set October 12, 1977, at the hour of 8:00 P.M. Wednesday evening, a regular Planning Commission meeting in the Pleasanton Council Chambers, 30 West Angela Street, Pleasanton, California, as the time and place to consider the following matter:

Application of LAVWMA for a conditional use permit to allow the construction and use of an export pump station and regulating reservoirs on a 15-acre site located south of the Commerce Circle industrial development and about 700 ft. east of Johnson Industrial Drive. Access to the site would be from Johnson Industrial Drive south of Commerce Drive.

This project is a part of the LAVWMA pipeline facility. An environmental impact statement has been prepared which assesses the environmental effects of the entire project, including the pump station and regulating reservoirs. The environmental impact statement is available for review at the Planning Department, 200 Bernal Avenue, Pleasanton, and at the public library, 4333 Black Avenue, Pleasanton.

The Planning Commission may approve, modify or deny the application, or recommend to the City Council any action deemed in the public interest.

Ford, Reagan spark GOP convention

By DOUG WILLIS
AP Political Writer

SAN DIEGO (AP) — California Republicans have a familiar agenda for their fall convention beginning today — Gerald Ford, Ronald Reagan and a dispute over the Panama Canal.

The former president and his chief rival for the presidential nomination in 1976 have turned the routine fall convention of the state party into a full-scale political extravaganza.

Also on the agenda are GOP national chairman Bill Brock, U.S. Sens. S.I. Hayakawa of California and Paul Laxalt of Nevada and all five contenders for the 1978 Republican nomination for governor.

But the dispute over President Carter's Panama Canal treaty which could spark the most interest. And a Republican whose face may be seen often is President Theodore Roosevelt, appearing on thousands of "Save-Our-Canal" buttons and posters.

Some conservatives — angry at Ford for endorsing the treaty to give Panama control of the canal — say they will boycott the Ford dinner Saturday.

"There will obviously be some anti-Ford lobbying going on, but it's not going to be vitriolic. We're not going to disrupt anything," said James Lacey, state chairman of Young Americans for Freedom.

Others are circulating petitions on the canal addressed to Hayakawa, who has said he still has not made a final decision on whether to vote to ratify the treaty.

Young Americans for Freedom also plan to flood the convention with 4,000 brochures and 1,000 or more buttons condemning San Diego Mayor Pete Wilson, convention host and a candidate for governor, as a disguised liberal.

All-in-all, it could be the liveliest California GOP convention since 1964, when supporters of Nelson Rockefeller and Barry Goldwater pulled out all stops in the presidential campaign.

Wilson and Fresno Assemblyman Ken Maddy are waging an especially tough battle for dominance of the moderate wing of the party.

Los Angeles Police Chief Ed Davis and state Sen. John Briggs of Anaheim are contending for conservative support, and Atty. Gen. Evelle Younger is trying to build a conservative-moderate coalition.

Normally the state GOP's fall convention is a low-keyed event that attacts only a couple hundred of the most dedicated party members for work sessions on party affairs.

But the lineup of national and state GOP stars and a potentially explosive battle over the Panama Canal have attracted an advance registration of nearly 3,000 delegates and alternates.

The canal was one of the chief issues in the presidential primary campaign between Ford and Reagan last year. But spokesmen for Ford and the former California governor say neither will put much emphasis on the issue in his convention address.

Aides said Ford was preparing a speech on U.S. foreign policy in the Middle East and Reagan, who has led the campaign against the treaty, will compare the Democratic administrations in Sacramento and Washington.

"If he mentions the canal, it will only be in passing. His views have been repeatedly stated," said Reagan aide Pete Hannaford.

Larry Peck, spokesman for the state GOP, confirmed there had been some boycott rumblings, but that advance ticket sales for the Ford dinner had topped 1,000, or within 150 of capacity.

"It will be sold out. If there was a boycott, it's folded," Peck said.

The convention will also be the showplace for some other new major campaigns.

State Sen. George Deukmejian of Long Beach, author of the death penalty bill enacted last August over Gov. Edmund Brown Jr.'s veto, last week announced formation of a campaign committee for attorney general.

And Assemblyman Dixon Arnett of Redwood City, who floated trial balloons for a campaign for lieutenant governor earlier in the year, announced this week that he plans to run for controller.

That left the field for lieutenant governor to record producer Mike Curb, who has endorsements from Ford and Reagan, and Assemblyman Mike Antonovich of Glendale, who has conservative backing.

Livermore concert

The Vic Trigger Band will celebrate the debut of its first record album, slated for November release, by hold holding a concert at Forester's Hall in Livermore Saturday night. Concert begins at 8:30 p.m., the hall is on J Street between First and Second streets, and tickets, at $3 each, are available at the BASS ticket agency on South Liermore Avenue near the flagpole, phone 443-2155. Southwind also appears on the bill.

'Black stars' under study

The Chabot College Planetarium opens the autumn session with a program called "Black, White and Worm Holes," beginning on Wednesday, Oct. 5 at 7:30 and 8:30 p.m.

In this program Dr. Billy A. Smith, planetarium director, will discuss some of the interesting ideas associated with "Black Holes," thought to be massive stars undergoing gravitational collapse. Using the planetarium projector and other special projectors, he wil& investigate some of the scientific implications of not only "Black Hole," but also "White Holes" and "Worm Holes."

This program will be presented at 7:30 and 8:30 p.m. on each Wednesday and Friday evening during the month of October. Admission is free, but reservations are recommended and can be obtained by telephoning 782-3000, ext. 417, from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday.

A new feature of the planetarium programs this autumn will be observation of stars, planets or the moon through telescopes near the Chabot College planetarium, Building 1900, on the campus in Hayward. Weather permitting, the telescopes will be available for viewing from 8 to 10 p.m. on Wednesday and Friday evening

Parks laud dry season visitors

Visitors to the East Bay Regional Parks District drew marks of A-for-excellent on their 1977 summer activity report card, according to EBRPD officials.

Park officials praised this summer's visitors for their careful handling of fires, minimal vandalism and overall cooperation with park rangers and employes.

Significantly, adults and kids earned their best marks during the most intensive season of park use in the district's 43 year history.

The district reported 139 brush and timber fires in 1977, the same as in 1976 though higher than the "normal" 96 reported in 1975. Structural fires dropped from 18 to 13. The largest park fire was three acres at the Point Pinole Regional Shoreland in Richmaond, caused by a spark from nearby railroad repair work. The second largest was a one acre burn at the Cull Canyon Regional Recreation Area in Hayward.

Improved emergency response, made possible by additional equipment and training of EBRPD firemen, contributed to fire control, according to district fire chief Rich Aronson.

He pointed out though that the critical 1977 fire season would continue until declared over by the state department of forestry.

Christian Nelson, chief of EBRPD parks and interpretation, reported there were no complaints about backed-up toilet plumbing or the dry lawns. He cited public help in "conserving park water as they do at home" and in cutting water use by more than 60 percent in some locations.

He noted a "dramatic" increase in the use of all water-oriented facilities yet fewer disturbances on the crowded beaches and fishing areas.

Del Valle Lake reported 157,000 visits this summer, compared to 134,000 last year. Tilden Regional Park an increase of 500,000.

"Many were disappointed by having to be turned away from Lake Anza at Tilden, but overall the public was more cooperative and better behaved than in other, less critical, years," Nelson said.

Revenue at food concessions, most located at swimming spots and open during the May to September season, was up 10 percent. At the Las Cumbres Family Campground near Lake Chabot there were 40 percent more campers but room was expected to be sufficient through the fall and winter there and at Lake Del Valle.

Road congestion and parking lot drinkers in Sunol Regional Wilderness were apparently eliminated by declaring the area "alchohol dry" and imposing a 50 cent admission fee.

New state bar head defends profession

Attorneys may be the unsung heroes of our land.

Well, if not that, at least they are a little better than the image some people have of them, according to Garvin Shallenberger of Santa Ana, the newly - elected president of the California State Bar.

"It's time that lawyers respond to unfounded or unworthy attacks on the their integrity as a group," Shallenberger told the Bar's 50th anniversary convention in San Diego recently.

"Being on all sides of all issues results in our cultivating many enemies, while simultaneously, for reasons that are obscure, not achieving at least an equal number of supports," he said.

He proposed the bar attack the supposed problem throughout the country 1) by answering critics, 2) by developing public relations programs to highlight the good things lawyers do, and 3) by getting adequate funding for the courts "so that they, and therefore we, can function as intended in our society."

Examples of great deeds done by lawyers recently were cited by Shallenberger. They included mention of Archibald Cox and Elliot Richardson who "stood fast against the abusive power of the presidency."

Area speech test winners

PLEASANTON — Local clubs won several awards at the Area 5 speech contest held last Sunday.

The Lawrence Livermore Laboratory Microcentury Toastmasters Group captured two out of three prizes, while the Dublin Amador club received the best speaker award.

Jan Ross of Dublin won the first place award for best speech. Phil Schultz of Livermore won first place for his evaluation speech and Jerry Wilverding of Livermore won first place for his impromptu speech.

The three Area 5 winners will compete next in a contest to be held at a champagne brunch Oct. 2 in Walnut Creek.
